7911 VOTERS ASK FOR REFERENDUM ON U. R. FRANCHISE

Twice Required Percentage of Total on Books Said to Have Signed Petitions Filed Today.

MORE PETITIONS BEING CIRCULATED

Referendum League Official Predicts 20,000 Signatures Necessary for Special Election Will Be Obtained.

Seven parcels of petitions, said to contain 278 forms with the signatures of 7911 registered voters, were filed with the Election Board today by a committee of the Citizens' Referendum League, which has undertaken to bring the United Railways franchise ordinance, recently enacted, to a vote of the people.

Louis H. Proske is chairman of the Petition Committee of the referendum organization, which has headquarters at 810 Chestnut street. He said there was no doubt of the sufficiency of the list of names, under the referendum law, which provides that, in order to bring about a referendum on a legislative measure, petitions with the signatures of 2 per cent of the registered voters at the last previous election for Mayor must be filed within 30 days after the approval of the ordinance. This required number would be about 3350, or less than one-half the number which Proske says are appended to the petitions delivered to the Election Board.

More Lists Being Circulated.

Proske said 500 petition blanks were still being circulated, and that there would be no difficulty in getting enough signatures to meet all the requirements for a special referendum election. The charter requires to bring about a special election petitions with the signature of 12 per cent of the registered voters. This would be about 20,000 names. Proske said he expected to get 20,000 signatures to the petitions now out.

There was little difficulty, Proske said, in getting the signatures thus far obtained. He said they were from all parts of the city and from every class of citizens.

Other members of the Petition Committee are William M. Brandt, Socialist leader; George R. Patterson, Dietrich Eitzman and Dr. Leverette H. Crapp.

The petitions were received at a meeting of the Election Board, with the new chairman, Glendy B. Arnold, presiding. Commissioner Buder said that, in any case where it should be found that a signer had moved out of the precinct in which he was last registered, the signature would not be counted. He said there was legal authority for this.

Chairman Arnold said he would favor counting all names which were found to be those of registered voters. No definite decision on this point was made.

The board will proceed to compare the signatures on the petition with the registration books.

RED RIBBON IN WINDOW SIGN OF CLOTHING FOR THE BELGIANS

Hang Your Marker Up Sunday So Collectors Can Get Garments for Oppressed People.

Hang a red ribbon in your window Sunday if you have any cast-off clothing which you are willing to give to destitute Belgian men, women and children. Members of the Advertising Club of St. Louis, aided by Boy Scouts, will collect the clothing and attend to the sending of it to devastated Belgium.

Responding to an appeal to aid the Belgians, the Advertising Club has arranged with the Automobile Club of St. Louis for about 600 automobiles to be used in the collection of the clothing. The red ribbon in the window was decided upon as the signal that there is in the house clothing which can be had.

The clothing appeal covers blankets and bed coverings and anything worn which can be used by a people whose all has been taken from them by the Germans.

GIVES DISLOYALTY AS GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE

Mrs. John J. Michel Says in Petition That Husband Is Pro-German.

Disloyalty is alleged as a ground for divorce in a suit filed today in the Circuit Court by Mrs. Malissa Michel against John J. Michel. She says that Michel was born in Germany and although he came away to escape military service, he is now a pro-German, as shown by his conversation and conduct.

He refuses her permission, she says, to express her opinion of the Kaiser and her disgust with him and the German Government, and has expressed the wish that every American ship starts across the sea will be sunk by the Germans. He has refused her permission, she says, to display the American flag, and on April 7, when she was putting up the flag, he tore it down and beat her.

George E. Mix, attorney for Mrs. Michel, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she reported Michel's attitude to the United States District Attorney's office, but that no action was taken.

BRITISH SHIPBUILDER DRIVES 4267 RIVETS IN NINE HOURS

Record Made by Baltimore Workman Exceeded and New World Figure Set.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—The record made by Charles Schock, who, at Baltimore, drove in 2720 rivets in nine hours, has been beaten in London. The workmen of Frazer & Frazer, engineers and boilermakers, asked the management to give them an opportunity of beating Schock's record and the effort was made yesterday by a selected squad of riveters.

A workman named Farrant hammered in 4267 rivets in nine hours, an average of slightly less than 475 an hour, or one rivet every 7½ seconds. This is claimed to be a world's record.

Chicago Shipbuilding Co. Employe Sets a New Record.

CHICAGO, May 8 (By A. P.).—Frank O. La Marche claimed today that a record for riveting was established when workmen at the Chicago Shipbuilding Co.'s yards on the Calumet River drove 3055 rivets in exactly nine hours.

The former record was 2805 rivets, La Marche, who is general superintendent of the company, said.

DRIVE OPENS HERE FOR RIVER MEN TO SERVE IN FRANCE

"QUICK ACTION" IS PROMISED RECRUITS

Officer of U. S. Engineers Reserve Corps on Mission Here Is Visiting Chief Waterways of Country.

Capt. S. E. Lawrence of the U. S. Engineers' Reserve Corps, arrived in St. Louis this morning to open a recruiting campaign for a regiment of boatmen and marine engineers to go immediately to France to speed up transportation of army supplies on the canals and rivers there.

Seven hundred and fifty men are needed for the regiment, to be divided into three companies. The War Department is eager to send the regiment to France by June 1. Gen. Pershing has twice made appeals for such a regiment to be sent immediately to relieve the transportation situation, Capt. Lawrence says.

Quick Action Promised.

The Captain, as a lure to recruits, holds out the promise of immediate action for those who enlist. "The men who go into this outfit," he said, "will get action right off the bat. There will be no long, tedious waits in a training camp and later a dull month or two in another camp back of the lines after their arrival in France, but as soon as they enlist these men will be started for France and on their arrival there they will start the work immediately of manning the boats carrying supplies along all the water courses of the country right up to the firing lines."

The regiment will be known as the Fifty-seventh Engineers, and its members will be armed as infantrymen to defend themselves in tight places. The work of recruiting the regiment has been made double hard by reason of the fact that none can be recruited for the service who are of draft age and because river men of all classes are in greater demand now than ever before and higher wages are being offered for their labor than were ever before offered.

Classes of Men Wanted.

The men wanted for the regiment are office clerks, master ship carpenters, marine gas engineers, steersmen, ship carpenters, hoisting engineers, blacksmiths, riggers, sailmakers, saddlers, teamsters, bargemen, electricians, boilermakers, machinists, steam engineers and cooks.

The pay of the men ranges from $31 to $81 a month, with 20 per cent added for foreign service. Each company will have 60 noncommissioned officers and 62 first-class privates.

Applications of recruits will be accepted at any regular recruiting station.

Capt. Lawrence is touring the larger waterways of the country in search of recruits. He started at Trenton, N. J., going down the Delaware River and the Ohio River, and is now preparing to go down the Mississippi, stopping at all of the larger cities on its course.

LEWIS ISSUES ORDER AIMED AT WINEROOMS

Dramshop Keepers Must Have Permit After June 1 to Use "Adjoining Rooms."

Excise Commissioner Lewis announced today that all dramshop keepers would be forbidden, after June 1, to ues any room adjoining their saloons, without a permit from him.

The purpose of the order, he said, was to prevent the use of such rooms as meeting places for women and saloon customers.

Lewis said he did not use the word "wineroom" in his order, because if he did so, every proprietor would say that the room used by him was not a wineroom. He believes the term "adjoining room" will be broad enough to cover all present abuses, and he holds thta a room is "adjoining," even if there is a hallway between.

Permits will be granted, he indicated, for bona fide restaurants in some rooms which adjoin saloons, and under the same proprietorship.

"But," the Commissioner announced, "they will have to be real restaurants. Camouflage sandwiches will not constitute a restaurant." He said he would send out deputies, or policemen assigned to his office, to investigate applications for permits.

When a saloon keeper with a permit for use of an adjoining room misuses the privilege, he said, the permit will be revoked. He did not indicate that the saloon license would be affected.

BRITISH MAKE SLIGHT GAINS EAST OF AMIENS; MAURICE'S CHARGES BRING CABINET CRISIS

TEST IN COMMONS FOR THE PREMIER COMES TOMORROW

Situation One of Vital Importance to Its Existence, View of London Papers Supporting Government.

ASQUITH "TRYING" TO REGAIN POWER

Lloyd George Expected to Make Statement of Facts Heretofore Withheld for Military Reasons.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—The action of Gen. F. B. Maurice, former chief director of military operations at the War Office, in impugning the veracity of Ministers of the Government has created a most serious political situation and one which is of vital importance to the Cabinet's existence, according to the views expressed by several of the morning papers.

Papers which have consistently supported the present administration rally to its side and insinuate or assert openly that former Premier Asquith and his followers are back of Gen. Maurice and that the affair is a maneuver to oust the Lloyd George Cabinet and put in its place a Cabinet headed by Asquith, Viscount Grey and the Marquis of Lansdowne.

As a consequence of the political situation brought about by Gen. Maurice's letter, Premier Lloyd George, according to the lobby report of the Daily Telegraph, considers it unavoidable to disclose facts which have been withheld up to this time for military reasons. The Premier, it is announced, intends to give facts and figures when he speaks on the Asquith motion on Thursday.

Express Attacks Maurice.

Gen. Maurice is attacked by the Daily Express, which hopes and believes that "the Government will dispose of this latest mare's nest in such an unmistakable manner that the unrestricted warfare which lately has been an unedifying feature of political life will disappear."

The Times editorially urges the Government to stand firmly on their proposal of a judicial inquiry into the statements of Gen. Maurice. While not attacking the Ministers the paper says:

"Gen. Maurice's challenge is one which no Government can afford to ignore or merely rebut. Unless and until it is disproved it will profoundly shake public confidence in every statement of the Government and revive those mischievous controversies of last winter, which were the greatest stumbling block in our preparations for the German offensive."

The matters in question, the Times adds, "cannot be settled by any ex-parte statement, however apparently convincing from the Premier.

"The Premier may have an unanswerable case against the charges of Gen. Maurice," it continues, "but the inevitable restrictions in a speech on military disposition, a growing public distrust of all official statements whether by Generals or Ministers, and the Premier's own incurable habit of protesting too much makes it hopeless to expect any end to this controversy except through an entirely disinterested inquiry."

The Evening News, which is credled with being in very close touch with Premier Lloyd George, says of the letter written by Gen. Maurice:

"We understand that both Bonar Law and Lloyd George are anxious to meet the General's charges at once and consider they have a very good answer, indeed, to them. The Prime Minister, when he made his statement as to the strength of the forces in France and Flanders at the beginning of this year and as to the number of white divisions in Palestine and Mesopotamia, was basing it on figures supplied to him by the War Office authorities. It is stated that he had no reason since to doubt the correctness of the figures."

Facing Serious Situation.

Thursday's debate, the Daily Telegraph thinks, will be the most serious that any Government has had to face involving the question of its continuance in power. The paper is convinced that the Ministers acted in perfect good faith when they made the statements which Gen. Maurice contradicts, and believes they merely repeated information

MAJOR-GENERAL F. B. MAURICE.

Gen. Maurice One of Most Authoritative of English Military Critics

Has Been Austere and Strictly Conventional Professional Soldier—Admirer of Lee and Grant.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—The most talked-of man in England today is Gen. Frederick B. Maurice, formerly chief director of military operations at the War Office.

If some volunteer General or some soldier who had been graduated from politics or business into soldiering had defied and trampled upon all the laws and traditions of the British army and all armies, he would not have excited such enormous surprise as has Gen. Maurice in his famous letter impugning the veracity of the ministry. Had some less well trained officer written the letter it would have been put down to lack of tradition and disregard of the conventialities by a citizen-soldier.

But Gen. Maurice, in his personality, his record and his career has been the personification of all that is conventional, austere and correct in the professional soldier. His weekly and recently bi-weekly conferences with American newspaper correspondents have impressed them with his wide knowledge, a passion for accuracy in detail and his personal aloofness, as though he were performing a function that professionally, he rather disliked and resented. Barring his uniform he would readily pass for a typical Prussian staff officer of the Moltke school.

Not Interviews, but Lectures.

His receptions to correspondents have not been interviews but lectures. The correspondents filed into the sanctuary at the War Office at the appointed minute. Any man who was late found the door barred against him. Military usage demanded promptness and Gen. Maurice would not forgive or excuse a lack of it.

A tall blond gentleman with a fresh pink complexion and a monocle, surrounded by maps of all sorts, contour maps, flat maps, maps of elevations—all marked with flags with numbers and with red, blue and yellow pencil marks, faced the correspondents. Gen. Maurice dealt with all those maps as Paderewski deals with the keys on a piano. He knew every detail of them.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," was the greeting; never anything more.

Standing before the maps with a professional manner and in language so precise that his stenographer would not need to correct it, the General stated the military situation.

"Suffer Fools Badly."

Having finished, the General paused for questions. All the answerable questions were replied to promptly and incisively. He was one of those "who suffer fools badly."

Foolish questions occasionally were asked by amateur strategists. He crushed them quickly and curtly. He did not parry with them; he simply killed them with the straight brutality such as Speaker Tom Reed dealt to his critics in years gone by in Washington.

"Good afternoon, gentlemen," he said, having finished; never anything more.

LINE PUSHED FORWARD AT THREE POINTS

Australian Troops Advance on Short Fronts in Spite of Barrage, Resulting in Improvement of Defensive Positions Between Somme and Ancre.

GERMAN ARTILLERY FIRE MORE LIVELY

Guns Develop Intense Activity Between Meteren and Kemmel and on French Front on Both Sides of Avre.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—Successful minor operations last night resulted in the advance of the British lines a short distance in the Amiens sector between the Somme and Ancre rivers, the War Office announced today.

Increased activity was developed by the hostile artillery early this morning on the Flanders battle front between Meteren and Kemmel.

"The hostile artillery has been active during the night between Locon and Robecq, and in the neighborhood of St. Julien. Early this morning the enemy's artillery developed increased activity in the Meteren-Kemmel sector."

The statement reads:

"As the result of successful minor operations carried out last night our line between the Somme and Ancre rivers has been advanced a short distance in three localities. We captured several prisoners."

Advance of 500 Yards Is Made by Australian Troops.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, May 8 (By A. P.).—The Australians last night made another advance, pushing forward their lines 500 yards along a front of 600 yards near Sailly-Le-Sac, on the sector east of Amiens. They also pushed back the Germans 300 yards along a front of 500 yards west of Morlancourt just above Sailly-Le-Sac. Notwithstanding a heavy barrage, the Germans were unable to prevent their advance.

Heavy Artillery Fighting on Both Sides of the Avre.

PARIS, May 8 (By A. P.).—Heavy artillery fighting occurred last night on both sides of the Avre River southeast of Amiens, the War Office announces.

The statement follows:

"There was very great activity of the artillery on both sides during the night north and south of the Avre.

"Raids attempted by the enemy west of Montdidier and in the regions of Thennes and Grivesnes were broken up by the French, who took prisoners."

Last Night's Official Reports on the Fighting

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—"Our own and the enemy's artillery have been very active north of the Lys and have shown some activity on other parts of the battle fronts," said Field Marshal Haig's report from British headquarters last night.

PARIS, May 8.—The communication issued last evening said:

"There has been marked activity by both artilleries on the front of Hailles-Villers-Bretonneux (Amiens sector). An enemy surprise attack to the south of Hartmans-Weilerkopf (Alsace), failed."

BERLIN, via London, May 8.—The official communication issued yesterday said:

"On the battle front in the morning hours the artillery activity was lively. On the northern bank of the Lys advances by English companies failed. Between the Ancre and the Somme the enemy employed Australians for a night attack. On both sides of the Corbie-Bray road they succeeded in reaching our foremost line. For the rest their twice repeated attack broke down before our posts with heavy losses. The artillery battle continued until daylight with the greatest intensity.

tachments pushed forward across the Aisne Canal into the enemy's positions near Courcy and brought back some prisoners.

"In the harbor establishment of Mariupol (On the north shore of the Sea of Azov) we were bombarded by Russian ships.

"Strong English detachments yesterday evening attacked Bulgarian positions south of Lake Doiran (Macedonian theater). They were repulsed.

"The advance of English brigades from Jericho across the Jordan (Palestine front), have been frustrated after bitter fighting, which lasted five days. The enemy was driven back into the positions from which he departed. Here German units distinguished themselves by the side of their Turkish comrades. The booty captured from the English was considerable."

SERIOUS CABINET CRISIS CREATED BY MAURICE CHARGES

supplied by their military advisers. The Daily Telegraph believes the country has complete and justifiable confidence in the Government, but adds:

"There is no doubt that the opposition led by Mr. Asquith regards the time as ripe for it to accept the responsibility of office. It is for the House of Commons to choose. The alternative Government would be exclusively a radical one."

The Daily Mail, which strongly supports Premier Lloyd George and is strongly inimical to former Premier Asquith, says the debate on Asquith's motion will afford him the needed opportunity for an attempt to bring about a parliamentary crisis. It remarks that when Gen. Maurice said that no soldier had seen his letter he did not say that no politician had seen it. This omission, the Daily Mail says, "coupled with Asquith's maneuvers in Parliament on Tuesday, suggests that the old gang believes it has found a weapon which will destroy. We believe these infatuated partisans have made one more miscalculation. • • • The nation has no confidence in the discredited and dilatory politicians and their pacifist hangers-on who were driven from office 18 months ago.

"Pacifist's Time at End."

The Daily Graphic says: "Mr. Asquith's intervention indicates that the political truce is now at an end. We must anticipate a new political struggle centering around the question of the Premier's honor."

The conservative Morning Post says that the Premier's own act brought the Government to the present serious pass. He refused, it declared, to take the advice of soldiers, the Germans took advantage of the situation and the Premier threw the blame on the soldiers. The Post adds:

"The hand of Nemesis is now stretched out. Lloyd George will need all his nimbleness to avoid being cracked on the wheel of destiny. He has had chance and has proved himself unfit for work in hand. But nobody can rejoice who considers the alternative, at the prospect offered."

The radical Daily News, which is opposed to the Premier, rejoices that the Government will not accept the Asquith motion, but will treat it as a vote of censure, so that Parliament on Thursday must take a decision involving the life of the Government.

Call for a Division.

The Government decided to treat Asquith's motion for a parliamentary investigation of the Gen. Maurice affair as a vote of censure and has issued a call to its supporters to attend the House of Commons Thursday for a division.

Andrew Bonar Law had told the House yesterday the Cabinet had decided to entrust to a commission of two judges the investigation of the charges which Gen. Maurice made.

Relieved of Position.

Gen. Maurice is one of the foremost military authorities and military historians of the war. He was recently relieved of his position as director of military operations at the War Office, and it was understood that he was then being transferred to an important position in France. No notice of another assignment has been issued, however, and apparently none was made. It was rumored that when he was relieved from the War Office position this was done because his statements to the newspapers regarding operations in France were substantially a contradiction of the Premier's statements to Parliament, notably his remarks that British success depended on the arrival of "Bluecher in time," Bluecher being the French and the possible reading between the lines that he doubted whether "Blumgher" would arrive.

The debate on Thursday will hinge upon a motion by Asquith worded, "that a select committee of this House will be appointed to inquire into the allegations, or correctness in certain statements of ministers of the Crown to this House contained in a letter of Major-General Maurice, late director of military operations, published in the press of May 7."

"Even if every statement were true, discipline in the army would be impossible if such letters were permitted to be published."

According to the Press Association, the proposal to rerer the Maurice affair to two judges may be regarded as withdrawn, as the suggestion did not appeal to the House, and its rejection by Asquith and his followers rendered it worthless.

On the other hand, it is added, it is doubtful whether any form of inquiry will be held.

Was 'Last' Son of Revolution.

OMAHA, Neb., May 8 (By A. P.).—Nelson Moore, believed to be the last real son of the American Revolution, is dead at his home here. Moore was born near Vernon, New York. His father, at 15, was fighting with the Continental army and was with Washington at Valley Forge.

Text of the Charges Made by Gen. Maurice Against Bonar Law and Lloyd George

NEW YORK, May 8.

THE following is the text of Gen. Sir Frederick B. Maurice's letter to the London Chronicle, as published in the New York Times today:

To the Editor of The Daily Chronicle:

My attention has been called to answers given to the House of Commons on April 23 by Bonar Law to questions put by R. C. Lambert, Col. C. R. Burn and W. M. R. Pringle as to the extension of the British front in France. Those answers contain certain misstatements, which, in sum, give a totally misleading impression of what occurred. This is not the place to enter into a discussion as to all facts, but the Hansard report (the official report of Parliament) concludes:

"Mr. Pringle: Was this matter entered into at the Versailles War Council at any time?"

"Bonar Law: That particular question was not dealt with at all by the Versailles War Council."

I was at Versailles when the question was decided by the Supreme War Council, to whom it has been referred. This is the latest of a series of misstatements which have been made recently in the House of Commons by the present Government.

On April 9, the Prime Minister said: "What was the position at the beginning of the battle? Notwithstanding the heavy cas[illegible]s in 1917, the army in F[illegible] was considerably stronger on Jan. 1, 1918, than on Jan. 1, 1917. (Hansard, Vol. 104, No. 24, P. 1328)."

That statement implies that Sir Douglas Haig's fighting strength on the eve of the great battle which began on March 21 had not been diminished. That is not correct.

Again in the same speech the Prime Minister said: "In Mesopotamia there is only one white division in all, and in Egypt and Palestine there are only three white divisions. The rest are either civilians or mixed with a very, very small proportion of British troops. In these divisions I am referring to infantry divisions."

This is not correct. Now, sir, this letter is not the result of a military conspiracy. It has been seen by no soldier. I am by descent and conviction as sincere a democrat as the Prime Minister, and the last thing I desire is to see the Government of our country in the hands of soldiers.

My reasons for taking the very grave step of writing this letter are, that the statements quoted above are known to a large number of soldiers to be incorrect, and this knowledge is breeding such distrust of the Government as can only end in impairing the splendid morale of our troops at a time when everything possible should be done to raise it.

I, therefore, have decided, fully realizing the consequences to myself, that my duty as a citizen must override my duty as a soldier, and I ask you to publish this letter in the hope that Parliament may see fit to order an investigation into the statements I have made.

I am, sir, yours faithfully,

F. MAURICE, Major-General.

NEW GERMAN PEACE DRIVE SAME OLD TRICK USED ON RUSSIA AND ITALY

Simonds Points Out That Germany Is Trying to Weaken Morale Behind the Western Line Before Starting Third Great Blow.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,
The Post-Dispatch Military Critic—Author of "The Great War."

Bitter experience has taught the peoples at war with Germany that when Berlin talks peace it means war, that a German campaign for peace bears no relation whatever to honest and sincere attempts to make peace, but is purely and simply designed to contribute to the military success of the Kaiser upon the battlefield.

Less than a year ago in Russia and subsequently in Italy we had an admirable and final example of what German peace proposals meant. The Germans used the talk of peace to disorganize and disrupt Russia. Temporarily adopting the Bolshevik phrase of "peace without annexations and without indemnities," German agents and German influences procured the utter demoralization of the Russian public and then of the Russian army.

A few months later the same process was repeated in the case of Italy. Just as unmistakably as the German General employed his artillery and his gas to reduce the barbed-wire entanglements and incapacitate enemy troops before an infantry attack, the German statesman and propagandist used the peace discussion to break down the intellectual and moral defenses of the Italian people; when the propaganda preparation was complete the army attacked, and we had the disaster of the upper Isonzo.

Once More a War Trick.

Today it is essential to recognize at the outset of a new peace offensive that it is once more a war measure. The German is using the talk of peace to prepare the way for a new attack by his armies. He is seeking to effect a breach in the moral trench lines of his foe, as he sed his artillery to prepare the way for his great attack of March 21.

We are, then, bound not to fall into the trap. We are bound beyond all else to avoid playing the German game by one more general and solemn discussion of alleged German peace terms, which suddenly leap from outer darkness to the headlines and front pages of all newspapers and become the topic of discussion of millions of people. This is exactly what the German wants to procure, this is the result which he is seeking and this is the result which in the past he has to a very great extent succeeded in procuring, to the very great injury of his enemies and to his own considerable temporary advantage.

The German is at present committed to the greatest offensive of all human history. He is in the midst of operations from which he hopes to emerge master of the world. He still expects to crush the British armies in France before the American troops can arrive in sufficitnt numbers to deprive him of the initiative and the offensive for the balance of the war.

There is not the smallest warrant for the belief at the present hour that, despite obvious delays and temporary disappointments, the German does not expect to win his great battle. We are confident, we on the allied side, because we have escaped a great disaster and achieved a unity of command and a co-ordination of resources which must give us greater powers for resistance than ever before. But there is no reason for foolish optimism. The simple truth is, that we have been twice in two months on the edge of grave disasters, the extent of which it is still unwise to discuss.

Germany Expects to Win.

The German knows how near he came to winning the war between March 21 and April 1. He expects to win it now, thanks to the advantages gained in that tragic 10 days. But he is intensely anxious that his foes should believe he has lost hope, that he has abandoned his grandiose expectations, and that he is really suing for peace under cover of neutral agencies. If he can establish this idea his next attack will be an even greater surprise than his last.

In the same fashion the German is seeking to assail the morale of the people behind the line. Another reserve in Flanders or Picardy would have tenfold effect if it had been preceded by a period of optimism and a general belief that the German had "shot his bolt" and was about to throw up the sponge. We may not fathom all that the German has in his mind, in launching his new peace offensive, but we may safely—we must, necessarily—recognize that this peace offensive has an intimate relation to the war offensive, that it is a detail in the military campaign of 1918, and it is as important as a military circumstance, as the drive for Amiens or the advance toward the Channel.

Recognizing this, we must all of us contribute to repulsing the offensive. There is a simple and complete answer to this offensive. The German wants his enemies to talk peace. He wants to repeat his successes of a year ago, when, while he was organizing his Italian offensive and preparing for the partition of Russia, he had everybody in the enemy countries solemnly and sagely discussing the termination of the war, and various elements in the population which ought to have been co-operating against Germany quarrelling over what were fair terms of peace.

War Decision in West.

The decision of this war will be had in Flanders and Picardy. The German will win or lose the war as he wins or loses this battle. He has not lost it and he is getting ready to attack with his armies again. Before making a third attack, which may be the most terrible, and will certainly be the last colossal endeavor, given his expenditure of men and material, he has launched a new peace offensive. This is all that sane and sensible people in the allied countries need to know now. It is idle, foolish, it approaches Bolshevik insanity to discuss peace terms under existing conditions.

We are to recognize that for his own purposes, which remain military and Prussian, the German has started a new peace discussion, and realizing this, we must talk war, think war, do war. Germany is still seeking victory and not peace before victory. We, too, are seeking victory, military victory, which is the sole chance of preserving the things we love and believe in. Germany has now attacked those behind the line as she attacked the line a few weeks ago. Her military attack has been checked, for a moment at least; the moral assault must be halted permanently at its point of departure.

So far in this war German propaganda has been more deadly than the "good German sword." It was never more dangerous than at this critical moment in the decisive campaign of the war. Every man or woman in any allied country who talks peace now will help Germany to win the war. Therefore, every loyal man and woman in every allied nation has a duty to perform, a danger to meet, an invasion to repel. The only time when we can talk peace safely will be after victory—and we have the victory still to win. Meantime, let us "fight it out on this line if it takes all summer"—and many summers.

SEPARATISTS IN AUSTRIA PLAN TO ENLARGE MORAVIA

INTERNAL SITUATION IS GREATLY STRAINED

Vienna Socialist Paper Which Was Excluded From Germany Says Berlin Does Not Realize Conditions.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—The latest separatist program in Austria, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from The Hague, quoting advices from Vienna, is to creat a greater Moravia which would include Silesia and the Slovene districts of Hungary, with the capital at Olmultz.

Vienna newspapers of Saturday received at The Hague, it is added, show that the internal situation in Austria-Hungary is greatly strained

The Socialist Arbeiter Zeitung, whose circulation in Germany has been stopped, declares that the Government cannot be aware of actual conditions in Austria, or otherwise it would not play with fire. It says that the adjournment of Parliament screwed down the last safety valve at the moment when an explosion of popular feeling was likely to be provoked by extreme economic pressure.

Discontent Is Rife in Austria, Traveler Says.

STOCKHOLM, May 8 (By A. P.). The Politiken publishes an interview with a person in an important position who has just traveled through the lands of the Central Powers. In the interview this person gives a dark picture of conditions in Austria. Famine prevails, and discontent was never so great, he says.

"The different nationalities regard each other like hungry wolves," the interview continues, "the Czechs are united in supporting a Czechish republic. Even the South Slavs are more openly taking a front against the Hapsburgs. The Poles are striving for a union with the Congress of Poland. The spirit of revolt is rife among all these three nations, and the sole desire is that the enemy may conquer. 'Long live Wilson' has become a regular cry in wide circles. The solution of the franchise question is impossible because of Magyar obstruction which takes the form of strikes and sabotage by the workmen.

"Hungary, which has plenty to eat, boycotts Austria, which is starving. Almost nothing is coming from the Ukraine because the Bolsheviki burned everything on their retreat, and what does come goes to Bohemia to help calm the flames of insurrection. The German provinces in their turn complain about this, saying their loyalty is being retarded by hunger."

The informant declares that the labor unrest is most acute, especially in Vienna and Prague. The Socialists are shifting rapidly to Zimmerwaldism and the Zimmerwaldists soon will be in the majority. Entire regiments of the dual monarchy's, subjects, especially Czechs, are fighting against the Germans in the Ukraine.

Serbia, which, under Austrian rule, has begun to raise itself out of ruins, now has come under domination, and an uprising there also is looked for. Austria-Hungary is simply Germany's vassal, and is hated heartily.

Conditions in Germany, the traveler reports, are quite different. The food situation is better than a year ago, but the general feeling even among the laboring classes is that victory is uncertain.

OVER 2 BILLION APPROPRIATION FOR SHIPS REQUESTED

Of Total $1,386,100,000 Will Be for Construction and $652,000,000 for Plants and Materials.

SOME COST PLUS CONTRACTS CANCELED

160 Steel Vessels Will Be Built by Submarine Boat Co. at Flat Basis of $960,000 Each.

WASHINGTON, May 8 (By A. P.).—Estimates submitted to Congress today by the Shipping Board call for an appropriation of $2,223,835,000.

For the cost of construction of ships authorized by the urgent deficiency bill of 1917, the board has requested an appropriation of $1,386,100,000, and for the purchasing and requisitioning of plants and material, $652,000,000.

The cost plus contracts of the Submarine Boat Co. at Newark, N. J., for construction of 160 steel ships of 5000 tons each have been canceled, Charles M. Schwab, production director of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, today told the Senate Commerce Committee in an investigation of the company's work. New contracts were substituted on a flat basis of $960,000 for each ship.

Cost plus contracts at the Hog Island and Bristol (Pa.) Government yards were continued, Schwab said. The substitution for the Newark Bay yard was designed to speed up construction, which, it was said, is far behind schedule.

Before hearing Schwab, the committee took up with Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board an appropriation for dry docks. Twenty-five or thirty million dollars are needed Hurley said, for docks on the Atlantic Coast. Two are necessary at Weehawken, N. J., and others are needed at New York and Boston, he said. Hurley suggested that a proposed appropriation for deepening the channel in Los Angeles Harbor be increased from $100,000 to $204,000.

FINNISH MONARCHY LIKELY, WITH A GERMAN FOR KING

Reaction From Sentiment for Republic as Result of Reign of Terror and Anarchy.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—There seems little doubt that a monarchy will be proclaimed in Finland says a Stockholm dispatch to the Times, and that the German candidate, Duke Adolph Frederick of Mecklenberg-Schwerin, uncle of the Crown Princess of Germany, will be King.

A spirit of reaction has spread throughout the country, it is added, and the Finnish constitution, which was the most democratic in Europe, is to be remodeled on more or less autocratic lines.

The Socialists and Democrats are under the ban for having favored the rebellion. The natural reaction against all who, with the aid of Russian Bolshevik soldiers, created a reign of terror and anarchy, it is declared, is telling against those who still cling to principles of democratic freedom and who would vote for a republic.

Finland, the Times dispatch continues, is still far from being completely pacified. Desultory fighting with the rebels continues at many points.

BERLIN CITIZENS CALLED ON FOR CLOTHES FOR WORKERS

Required to Furnish at Once 40,000 Complete Secondhand Suits.

AMSTERDAM, May 8 (By A. P.).—The city of Berlin has been ordered to produce forthwith 40,000 complete secondhand suits for war workers, principally those engaged in railway and farming work. It is to be a "voluntary surrender against a small payment," but warning is given that if the clothes are not forthcoming they will be taken by force. This applies especially to persons whose social position warrants the assumption that their wardrobes are well stocked.

Monday was the first day for collection and depositories were opened for the purpose. There was a rush of people laden with old coats and trousers who did not conceal their anxiety to get possession of a certificate handed to "voluntary" contributors, exempting them from official inspection of their wardrobe. The result of the first day's contributions is said to warrant confidence that the required total will be reached easily.

$50,000 Fire in School Building.

DES MOINES, Io., May 8 (By A. P.).—Fifteen hundred pupils escaped without injury when fire destroyed the old west wing of the West High School Building here today, entailing a loss estimated at $50,000. Defective wiring is believed to have caused the fire.

POST-DISPATCH MAN GIVES FRENCH AND U. S. ARMY VIEW OF SITUATION

Forces Now in Field Not Sufficient to Administer Decisive Defeat Necessary to Bring Kaiser to Terms, Correspondent Asserts.

By LINCOLN EYRE,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, May 7.—In the accomplishment of the allies' program of victory there are today two factors of transcendent importance—the blocking of impending German drives against the British, French and American fronts this summer and the shipment of sufficient man power from the United States to assume democracy's numerical superiority on the battle field a year hence. That is the conclusion inevitably drawn from conversations I have been privileged to have in the last few days with personages close to the French Government and officers holding high rank in the administration of the American expeditionary force.

Unless events not directly concerned with military operations bring about her downfall, Germany will not be defeated this year. The idea that she is vanquished because the progress of her armies has been checked thus far is overoptimistic She will be vanquished only when a decisive defeat is inflicted upon her by the fighting forces of the allies.

Up to the United States.

Such a defeat can be engineered only when our soldiers and our guns are more numerous than hers. Neither France nor Great Britain nor Italy nor all three together can achieve a sufficient preponderance of numbers. It is squarely up to the United States. Troops—infantrymen, gunners, aviators—sufficient in bulk to bear down upon and crush the masses of the Kaiser, as these latter overwhelmed and forced back the numerically weak British divisions at the end of last March, must be forthcoming in America.

Meanwhile, the French and British, assisted by such contingents as Gen. Pershing has been able to place at Gen. Foch's disposal, must hold the line. That they will hold the line no American soldier doubts.

The German offensive so grandiosely inaugurated "under the eyes of his imperial majesty, the Emperor and King," is by no means full grown, according to the best information available. With periods of lull like the present interval, it is likely to continue until mid-summer, possibly until fall. Of the 202 enemy divisions reported in line or in reserve on the eve of America's entry into the Picardy battleground, some 60 remain unused.

80 Divisions Out of Fighting.

This does not imply that the remaining 142, or even any very large percentage of them, are incapacitated. With estimated casualties of 400,000 in killed, wounded and prisoners, the Germans have lost strength in man power equivalent to 40 divisions. But as no division can continue to function after its losses have reached a total of 50 per cent of its total effectives, more than 80 divisions must be temporarily hors du combat. Fifty or 60 of these divisions, however, doubtless will be reformed within two months, some of them within much less time, depending to a certain extent upon how quickly the slightly wounded men return to their regiments. Thus it is improbable that more than 20 divisional units have been finally erased from the roster of the German army.

These estimates are based on a division of 10,000 men, but recent French and British estimates have given almost 14,000 men to a German division.)

As the allies have not escaped without considerable losses, the German numerical superiority referred to by Premier Lloyd George and others continues to exist. Hence an allied counter offensive would be of dubious value at the present time. It is a military axiom that a smaller force can assail a larger one only on a limited scale. Franco-British troops would be restricted in onslaught on a comparatively narrow front and could not penetrate the enemy's line beyond a certain point.

Says Allies Should Delay Offensive.

Assailants suffer more severely than defenders; the allies would pay more to gain a few square kilometers than the Germans would pay to withstand an assault, whereas, under conditions prevailing since March 21, the Germans are paying a price that must eventually bankrupt their resources in cannon fodder.

From all I have been able to learn about the strategical lay of the land the allies will be wise to refrain from any attempt at an offensive beyond certain operations necessary for the consolidation of their front such as the localized attacks successfully driven home by the British at Villers-Britonneaux. Since French divisions were sent to aid the British in Flanders weeks ago, it is evident that Gen. Foch considers direct assistance in "stonewalling" the enemy's advance more useful to Gen. Haig than an offensive diversion on the French front would be.

The basic cause of the retirement of the Fifth British army was the insufficiency of its reserves. Not only had the divisions composing it been reduced in personnel, but it was obliged to occupy the firing line with a perilously inadequate number of rifles. It had become the one weak line in the allied chain from the sea to Switzerland, of which Hindenburg doubtless was well aware. When the link broke a master craftsman was needed to repair it, and so by unanimous consent Gen. Foch came into his own.

Under unity of command, long since an imperative ingredient in the preparations for the allies' ultimate triumph, so critical a state of affairs can no longer exist. Hereafter there can be no gaps on the front because there may be no gaps in the points of view of the military chieftains.

Not even Gen. Foch, however, can do more than keep our enemies at bay unless the strength to overcome them is vouchsafed him.

Joffre's Analysis of Situation.

A year ago, when I was in America with the French mission, Marshal Joffre observed that to win the war the allies must have a greater number of troops, and the material for such troops could come only from among young men of the United States. This statement is more than ever true today. Men must be found and trained with all possible swiftness and ships must be built to carry them to France. The element of speed is doubly important, first, so that our divisions may be assembled into an army ready to function as such in the final crushing blow at Prussianism.

In the face of the present emergency Gen. Pershing has turned over all the forces under his command to the inter-allied generalissimo to be amalgamated into British or French as the latter sees fit. This naturally has a disintegrating effect on the American expeditionary force, and if continued indefinitely, would obviously tend to deprive us of the opportunity of grouping our divisions together into a compact, cohesive whole. There is no present intention, however, of permitting the existing crisis to interefere with the eventful formation of an army operating under Gen. Pershing as the British army does under Gen. Haig, subject only to the strategical guidance of Gen. Foch. And the quicker American regiments reach France the sooner will that army come into being.

The second consideration emphasizing the importance of haste is the need to frustrate Ludendorff's schemes for getting fresh man power out of Russia. Not only is that wily plotter bending every effort to repatriate hundreds of thousands of German prisoners of war still in the hands of the Russians, but there are signs that given sufficient time he will even seek to compel the Russians to fight for the Kaiser. The United States can and must show him that time works for civilization and not for the Hohenzollerns.

EMILIE GRIGSBY FIGURES IN BRITISH ARMY COURTMARTIAL

Officer Charged With Furnishing Soldiers to Care for Chickens of Late C. T. Yerkes' Ward.

LONDON, May 8 (Special cable).—Emilie Grigsby's name has figured in a courtmartial in Westminster. Col. Mackay, the defendant, was charged with supplying soldiers to act as gardeners and chauffeurs for his personal friends, taking the men from their proper military duties for which they are paid.

Mackay was said to have visited Miss Grigsby in her cottage near London nearly every second week and to have sent soldiers to her to do her gardening.

It is charged that while Mackay was spending week-ends at Miss Grigsby's or Mrs. Brandt's he turned in accounts for expenses purporting to have been incurred in traveling about the country on military duty.

Emilie Grigsby's name became familiar in New York in connection with litigation over the estate of Charles T. Yerkes. He died in 1906, leaving an estate estimated at $25,000,000 and a Fifth avenue home filled with art treasures.

Another city house, nearly as sumptuous as his own, had been built and maintained for years by him with Emilie Grigsby as its occupant. She had been known as the ward of Yerkes.

HIGH LOAN STANDING FOR CITY AND STATE

Seventy-Two Missouri Counties Reach or Exceed Per Capita Distribution Rate.

A high standing for St. Louis and for Missouri, in the per capita distribution of bonds of the third Liberty Loan, is expected to result from the final tabulation of reports for the campaign. No attempt to reach a total of subscriptions will be made by the Campaign Committee before tomorrow afternoon.

Many reports from various ones of the 94 Missouri counties in the Eighth (St. Louis) Federal Reserve District, were received today. Up to this morning the reports showed that 72 of the counties had reached or exceeded their per capita distribution rate, of 7½ per cent. The St. Louis campaign organiaztion has estimated that this city may show a number of individual purchases equal to 22½ per cent of the population, but this is not a final estimate.

May Be Flag Competitor.

J. G. Hughes, State chairman for Missouri, believes this State will be a strong competitor for the highest honor flag awarded by the Government for per capita distribution of bond sales.

William R. Compton, district director, said it was likely that the committee's estimate of a total of $176,000,000 in subscriptions for the district would be borne out by the final figures. This would be 135 per cent of the district's quota, or a 35 per cent oversubscription.

Mrs. Theodore Benoist, State chairman of the Woman's Committee for Missouri, which includes St. Louis and all the counties in Missouri, received the following telegram from Antoinette Funk, vice chairman of the National Woman's Liberty Loan Organization:

"Your report of over $17,000,000 sales in Missouri places you well toward the top. Delaware leads with 120 per cent of quota subscribed by women. Two or three other states approach your proportion and quite a large number have subscribed one-third of quota. Congratulations. The is not final, as many states have not yet been heard from."

William H. Danforth, who recently left St. Louis to engage in Y. M. C. A. war work in France, cabled congratulations to Compton, saying:

"Congratulations to the organization on magnificent work. Appreciated by all over here. We are proud of our home folks."

The public utilities of St. Louis on the city hall team reported 100 per cent with 1057 employes subscribing $70,800.

Postoffice Section Report.

The report of the Postoffice section, women's division, Liberty Loan Organization, has been made to Mrs. John H. Holliday, chairman of the division, by Mrs. Colin M. Selph, chairman of the section. It shows a total of $1,606,650, of which $249,950 was obtained by letter carriers, the balance being credited to the women's own work. The total number of subscribers was 8474. The sub-chairmen were Mrs. Joseph D. Farrell, Mrs. George H. Moore, Mrs. Henry W. Blodgett, Mrs. Edward Magnus, Mrs. Alcee Stewart, Mrs. A. L. Hawkins, Mrs. P. B. Jamieson, Mrs. Edward L. Preetorius, Mrs. Herman C. Stifel, Mrs. Fountain Rothwell, Mrs. Sam L. Stigall, Mrs. Eugene Reno and Mrs. A. C. Leggatt.

Reports up to last night show that employes of the Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. bought $122,800 worth of bonds. Employes of the system bought $364,000 worth, which is $20,000 more than they bought of both the first and second loans. More than 100,000 Bell employes throughout the United States bought more than $7,000,000 of the third loan.

FIRST COMMUNITY KITCHEN IN CITY PROVES POPULAR

Crowds Which Visit Place Force Opening Day Sooner Than Women's Committee Had Planned.

AIM IS TO OPEN SIX MORE PLACES

Hot Meals Furnished for Families in Which Mother Works at Low Cost as Conservation Move.

St. Louis' first community kitchen, at 1725 South Seventh street, which was scheduled to start today, opened yesterday because the neighborhood came to be served and insisted on being served.

Community kitchens are designed to furnish meals for families in which the mother works, permitting her to drop in on the way home from the factory and get a hot meal to carry home and set before her family. Its purpose is conservation and education—conservation in the more judicious selection and utilization of food, and education in training housewives to the cooking of food which will furnish the greatest nutriment for the smallest cost.

It is the intention of the committee of the Women's Central Committee on Food Conservation, of which Mrs. Eugene T. Senseney is chairman, to establish at least six similar kitchens in various parts of the city.

Seats for 60 Persons.

The first kitchen occupies the first floor of a two-story building. It has a serving room, equipped with 11 tables and seats for 60 persons; a kitchen, pantry and store room. It is planned eventually to use the second floor of the building as a bakery.

In the rear is a chicken coop to be filled soon by chickens to eat the scraps, for nothing is to be wasted in the kitchen. Even every particle of fat is hoarded and will be converted into soap. In the rear also is a dog kennel soon to be inhabited by a dog to guard the chickens.

The serving room is spotlessly clean. Its floor is bare and the tables have no covers, but they are snowy white. Curtains at the windows where geraniums bloom give a home air and the touch is carried out further with pots of pansies on the table.

Without, across the front of the building, is this sign:

Neighborhood Kitchen. This is your kitchen. We do the cooking for you.

On a board before the door is the first menu:

Coffee and Home-Made Coffee Cake.
Bean Soup and Filled Cabbage.
Noodles and Stewed Apricots.

Each combination is served for five cents. Coffee is three cents. Rolls are one cent each.

30 Cents a Day for Meals.

The menus are so prepared that a combination of any two of the 5-cent offerings will furnish what experts say is sufficient food for the average workingman—1000 calories. In other words, a workingman can live for 30 cents a day at the Neighborhood Kitchen and get enough nutriment to keep up his efficiency.

No profit is expected from the kitchen. Prices will be adjusted so that the receipts just cover the operating expenses.

The reason that 1725 South Seventh street was selected for the first kitchen is because 90 per cent of the women in the neighborhood are employed in factories. And the serving force at the kitchen has been selected with the fact in mind that the entire neighborhood is of Austrian origin or extraction.

So the woman selected to be in charge of the kitchen is Mrs. Edward Schulz, wife of the neighborhood physician, who lives next door. The cook is a Hungarian, Mrs. Lena Goblesh, who knows well what the kitchen's patrons like best. Only two other persons are employed—a man and his wife, the man to keep the premises clean, the woman to maintain the spotlessness of the kitchen's opening day.

The cook was at work preparing the "filled cabbage" on the menu. It was discovered that filled cabbage consists of two ounces of ground pork and beef rolled in a cabbage leaf, well seasoned and boiled. It is said to be a favorite Hungarian dish. With bean soup, it costs five cents.

How well the neighborhood has responded to the kitchen idea is shown by the fact that more than a dozen of its women have come to volunteer help and have hemmed towels, scrubbed floors and cleaned.

Children First Customers.

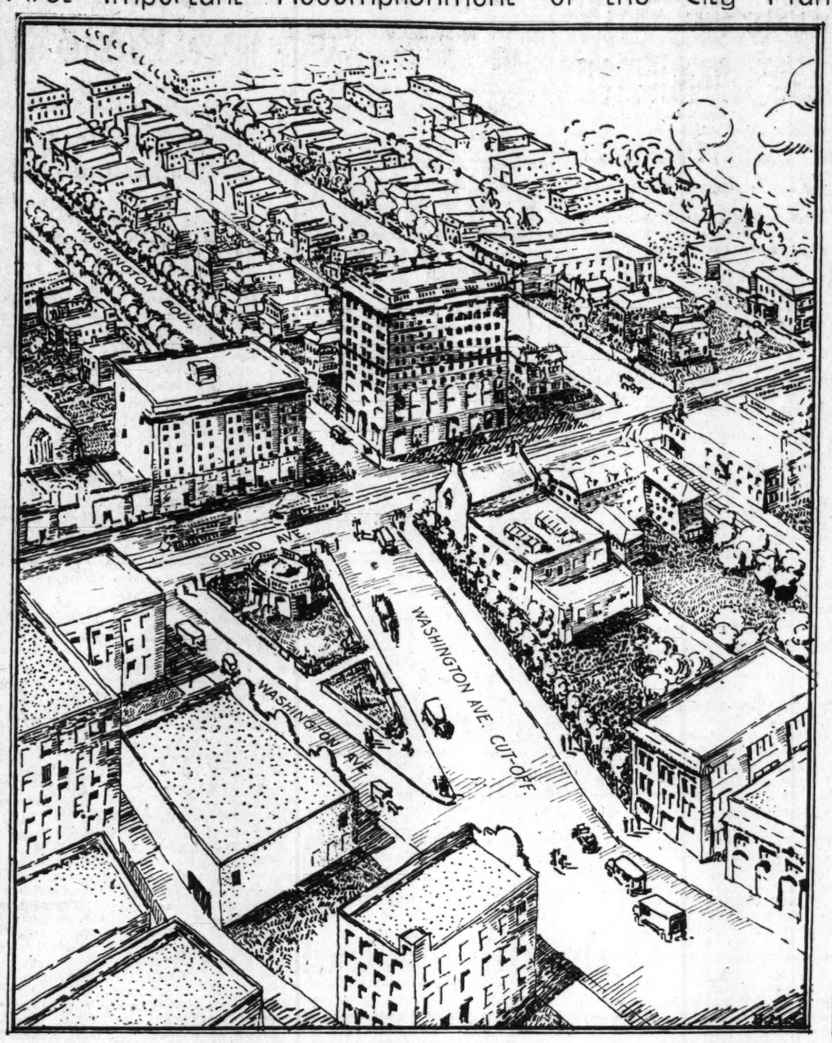

The first customers were three children of a woman employed. They came at noon yesterday, each with 5 cents. Customers when the kitchen opened at 6:30 a. m. today were men who work nights, some of whom stopped for their breakfasts and some of whom brought buckets in which they carried their coffee home.

One woman who first caught the purpose of the kitchen said last night as she carried her family's supper away, "What do I care for 60 or 75 cents? I make $2 a day and I would rather buy my suppers here than come home and work till 8 o'clock at night getting them myself."

Another woman, who hurried in last night, said that she had gone over to see her mother-in-law and her supper burned.

Widening Is Expected to Make World Famous Street of Washington Avenue

First Important Accomplishment of the City Plan

The cut-off is at the northeast corner of Grand and Washington and is soon to be completed as a part of the Washington avenue widening project. This will eliminate the tortuous and dangerous crossing as at present. The triangular space between the present street and the new roadway will be used at present as an automobile parking space and later could be a useful site for a comfort station. Note that the three corners created by the new cut-off are already occupied respectively by the Humbold Building, University Club and Third Baptist Church.

Last Legal Obstacle Has Been Removed and Street Department Begins Surveys at Grand Avenue.

BY HAROLD BARTHOLOMEW
Engineer City Plan Commission
Written for the Post-Dispatch

GREAT cities are usually noted for important public buildings, plazas or streets. In speaking of Paris, one instinctively thinks of Champs Elysees, of the Strand in London, of the Ringstrausse in Vienna, of Broadway in New York and of Michigan avenue in Chicago. Scarcely a city with which one is at all familiar but has its prominent thoroughfare or thoroughfares.

In some casese these justly famous streets are boulevards lined with beautiful homes. Others are business streets crowded with traffic. Usually these streets are famous by reason of their location in that they are situated as to lead from one important part of the city to another and consequently have been given an exceptional width and usually accommodate a considerable amount of traffic.

The average visitor to St. Louis probably leaves without having gained a distinct impression of the importance of any one particular street. It was originally in the minds of those who conceived King's highway to make of it a boulevard the equal of which few cities possess, but King's highway as yet does not create a distinct impression upon the casual visitor to St. Louis or upon the general public, although it is to be hoped that this may still become a boulevard in fact as well as in name, which shall in some respects compare with the hopes of those who originally conceived it.

St. Louis can, however, truthfully say that it will soon have a thoroughfare which will be a distinct credit to the city and one which within the course of a few years will become by far its most important street. Through the passage of an ordinance by the Board of Aldermen appropriating the money for the actual acquisition of the land to increase the width of Washington avenue from 60 to 80 feet between Jefferson and Grand avenues, the last legal obstacle to the actual accomplishment of this widening is removed. All that now remains to be done is to actually tear down the buildings which encroach upon the new line and the paving of the street. The Street Department is now surveying the corner of Washington avenue and Grand in order to immediately carry out the cut-off on the northeast corner so that the present jog at Grand avenue may be removed. The widening of the balance of the street will probably take place during the year. West of the Coliseum approximately 10 feet will be taken from either side of Washington avenue to make the new width of 80 feet. The total cost of this improvement is $552,511.89, of which the city's share is $66,714.94.

The ordinance providing for the widening of Washington avenue was passed April 7, 1911, and a commission to fix benefits and damages was appointed in 1912, consisting of Judge Homer, A. H. Frederick and Sam Raithell. In 1915 it became necessary to appoint a new commission, consisting of Judge Homer, Sam Raithell and Louis Nolte. This latter commission presented its report early in 1917. Four exceptions to the findings of the commission were filed and would probably have held up the completion of this improvement for two or three years had not all of those who took exceptions withdrawn their suits, thus permitting the city to proceed with the improvement. The fact that the actual physical widening of Washington avenue will soon become a reality is of particular importance to St. Louis inasmuch as it marks the first momentuous step in the completion of the city plan.

The opening, widening or rearrangement of existing streets in any city is a difficult, expensive and tedious task, yet one which cities must face. In point of usefulness the widening of Washington avenue may be said to be exceedingly cheap, for there will now be possible a thoroughfare from the heart of the business district to the very center of the largest residential district, six and one-half miles long, amply wide for the majority of traffic which will use it and as direct a route as could be created. All Washington avenue west of Grand is one of the heaviest traffic streets in the city, while in the business district today Washington avenue is probably the most active business street. Its connection with the Eads Bridge on the east and proximity to Delmar avenue in the west means that it will become the most used thoroughfare in St. Louis, since it lies directly in line of heaviest traffic movement and greatest building activity.

That the cost of widening Washington avenue is low as compared with the usefulness to be gained from the thoroughfare, one can but compare with what Chicago is spending for the widening of its most important thoroughfare—Michigan avenue. South of Randolph street Michigan avenue has a width of 140 feet and is Chicago's leading thoroughfare. North of Randolph street to Lincoln Park, a distance of approximately two miles, Chicago is about to widen Michigan avenue to 130 feet at a cost of $12,000,000. For a portion of that distance, on either side of the Chicago River, the thoroughfare is to be a double level street, the upper roadway being for light pleasure vehicles only, the lower roadway for commercial traffic only.

New York City has recently expended $9,000,000 for the extension of Seventh avenue southward, including the widening of Varick street from 65 to 100 feet for a distance of approximately one mile.

In Brooklyn, Livingston avenue was widened from 50 to 80 feet for a distance of approximately two miles at a cost of $4,000,000.

In practically all of the large as well as the small cities of the United States it has become necessary to widen and extend certain existing streets to conform with the increased demands of vehicular traffic. Even in San Antonio, Tex., the main street, which is Commerce street, has been widened from the varying width of 36 and 50 feet to a uniform width of 65 feet for a distance of a little over a third of a mile at a total cost of $400,000. Many other instances could be cited. As compared with any of these, the widening of Washington avenue seems to be exceedingly cheap.

St. Louis is the only large city which has no wide streets lying between its business and residence centers. The completion of the widening of Washington avenue, between Jefferson and Grand will create the first complete thoroughfare between business and residential centers having a width of more than 60 feet. While a width of more than 80 feet might be desirable on Washington avenue, the fact that the Major Street Plan for the city now being gradually executed will provide other approaches to the business districts from the west, such as Morgan street, Locust, Olive, Pine, Chestnut and Market by certain widenings or cut-offs to make the use of these streets more logical than at present, obviates the necessity for a greatly increased width on Washington avenue. Since by the development of this plan all the traffic from the west will gradually be distributed over several streets and no great congestion or concentration of realty values will occur.

Moving Page Line Recommended.

West of Jefferson avenue the City Plan Commission has recommended the removal of the Page line to Lucas avenue, which is the next block north, so that the benefit of the full 80 feet of width may be had for exclusively vehicular and pedestrian traffic. By so doing it is believed that Washington avenue west of Jefferson will develop into a distinctly high-class business or shopping street, though this development may necessarily be the result of several years' growth.

Whatever the actual development of Washington avenue may be, St Louis may congratulate itself upon its completion, for it has unusual significance as being the first important accomplishment of the city plan, and as previously stated, will make possible the development of a thoroughfare of which St. Louis may justly be proud.

AVIATOR IS KILLED WHEN PLANE FALLS AT SCOTT FIELD

Second Lieutenant W. W. Smith of Pawpaw, Ill., Loses His Life While Doing "Stall."

COMPANION FLYER INJURED SERIOUSLY

Engine of Machine Believed to Have Stopped 600 Feet Up When Difficult Climb Was Attempted.

The first flying fatality at Scott Field, the army aviation camp near Belleville, occurred at 7 o'clock last evening, when an airplane fell from a height of 500 feet, causing the death of Second Lieut. William W. Smith of Pawpaw, Ill., and the serious injuring of First Lieut. Frederick M. Kern of Newark, N. J. Smith was in charge of the machine.

A mechanic was killed at Scott Field last fall by the propeller of a descending airplane, but no serious accident to a flyer had happened there. Instructors Couch and Jones, of Scott Field, lost their lives in accidents at a Louisiana aviation field during the past winter.

Maj. Brookes, commanding officer at Scott Field, said this morning that the plane in which Smith and Kern were flying was about 600 feet from the ground, and that they were doing straight flying, and were making a "stall," when the airplane fell.

A "stall" is a climb in which, because of the angle assumed, the engine may stop. In such a case, it is necessary to right the machine promptly and start the engine, to avert a fall.

The commanding officer would not comment on reports that the mechanism of the airplane failed to work properly. He said an investigation of the accident was being made.

Lieut. Smith was dead when he was taken from the machine. Lieut. Kern is said to have several broken bones, and has not thus far been able to tell of the circumstances of the accident. His condition is believed to be serious.

Lieut. Smith was 34 years old, and was a military instructor in aeronautics. Lieut. Kern, who is 33, recently received his commission as a flyer.

Lieut. Smith's body will be sent to his home.

Two Marine Aviators Killed in Fall in Florida.

MIAMI, Fla., May 8 (By A. P.).—Lieut. Melville E. Sullivan of Richmond, Va., and Machine Gunner Calvin E. Cronk of Seattle were killed at the Marine Corps flying station near here yesterday when their machine fell 500 feet. The motor is believed to have stopped as the airplane slipped into a tail spin.

LUXBURG SAILS FOR HOME

Departs for Sweden Under Allied Safe Conduct Guarantee.

BUENOS AIRES, May 8 (By A. P.).—Count von Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina, who was dismissed by the Argentine Government last fall because of his notorious "spurlos versenkt" message and other activities objectional to Argentina, is sailing for home today. Ill health claimed for him and various complications regarding arrangements for his voyage had caused his departure to be postponed several times.

It has been announced that Count von Luxburg, under an allied safe conduct guarantee would sail for Sweden on board the Swedish motor steamer Suecia. Dr. Perj, former German Minister to Peru, who was handed his passports by the Peruvian Government when it severed relations with Germany last autumn, sailed on the same steamer, as did the German Charge d'Affaires at Montevidieo, completing the exodus of German diplomats from the South American republics which have broken with Berlin.

THIEF GETS WOMEN'S APPAREL

Man Who Reports Robbery Says Articles Were Salesmen's Samples.

Albert Solomon, a guest at the Antlers Hotel, Eighteenth and Olive streets, reported to a policeman last night that his room had been ransacked and two pink silk corset covers, three pink silk teddy bear suits, several silk waists and two silk aprons taken.

"You must be a perfect 36," remarked the policeman.

"I'm a traveling salesman," explained Solomon. "The articles taken were samples."

Tells of Work of Women Medical Units Overseas

Mrs. Charles Lewis Tiffany Speaks Here in Interest of Hospitals Being Financed in France.

MRS. CHARLES L. TIFFANY

Mrs. Charles Lewis Tiffany of New York, who is directing the work in this country of the Women's Oversea Hospitals which are being established in France and financed by the American Women's Suffrage Association, described at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler today the work of the first two medical units composed entirely of women, to be sent to France from the United States. The luncheon was under the auspices of the Woman's Equal Suffrage League of St. Louis.

"The first medical staff composed entirely of women to go from this country to France sailed from New York Feb. 17, last, under the auspices of the Women's Oversea Hospitals of the National Women's Suffrage Association," said Mrs. Tiffany. "This staff had 27 members, 10 of whom were women physicians and surgeons of prominence. Recently 15 more nurses and doctors, all women, sailed, and we intend to add to theis number from time to time.

Not Recognized by U. S.

"The American Government has not as yet recognized the woman physician in war work, so our units are under the direction of the French Government. When the first contingent reached France the plan was to establish a hospital immediately at some selected point, for the civilian refugees and repatriates of France. Three assignments were made, each one later being withdrawn by the French for fear that the locations were too dangerous.

"While efforts were being made to select a location for the unit, the German drive got under way and the French Government called upon the women's unit to go into evacuation hospitals and help care for the wounded. All members volunteered, with the result that the unit has been working shoulder to shoulder with the men surgeons since the start of the German offensive.

"The members are now working in a hospital close to the front lines at Ognon, south of Noyon, and just west of where American troops are fighting with the French army. It is possible they may have cared for American wounded by this time. The staff is entirely made up of women. Besides the 10 women physicians, there are women chauffeurs, a woman plumber, a woman farmer, who will raise vegetables in connection with the hospital we will soon open; an accountant, a file clerk, an electrician, a pharmacist, an X-ray specialist, a dentist and a child specialist.

Some Paid Salaries.

"Some of the women volunteered but others are being paid salaries, according to army scales. The two women directors of the unit receive a Captain's pay, the physicians and nurses all get a Second Lieutenant's pay and the artisan members receive from $30 to $50 a month. One woman getting a salary of $3000 in New York gave up her work and joined the unit at $30 a month, and several other similar instances of sacrifice have come to our attention.

TOO MUCH DAYLIGHT FOR OUTDOOR MOVIES

Predicted That 20 of the 25 Open Air Theaters Will Close.

Too much daylight threatens to keep the airdomes dark. Joseph Mogler of 3936 North Ninth street, president of the Moving Picture Theater Owners' League today predicted that as a result of the daylight saving regulation 20 of the 25 open-air picture shows of St. Louis will be forced to suspend operations this year.

Five so-called combination picture plants, which have roofed theaters and airdomes adjoining them, will attempt to operate on a half inside and half outside basis, he says, but this is purely experimental.

With the clock set forward an hour it will not be dark enough in the summer season to start a picture show until 9 p. m. This late start would make it impossible to give more than one show in an evening. Heretofore two shows have been given, the first starting about 8 p. m. and the last ending about 10:30.

"Our league has held a number of meetings to discuss the new problem presented by the daylight saving regulation," said Mogler. "Most of the airdome men have reached the conclusion that it will not pay them to operate on the present time schedule. The proceeds from one show a night would little more than pay expenses.

"In former years we found that the attendance was largest at the first show. Working people who have to rise early do not want to sit up until 11 p. m. at an airdome. There has always been a certain percentage of those who did not mind staying up late and these were served by the second. We could depend only on this class if we tried to operate under the new schedule. Only a few of the airdomes have opened this season and I think most will remain closed."

A few of the larger airdomes, like the Lyric Skydome at Taylor avenue and Delmar boulevard and the Hamilton at Hamilton and Easton avenues, will try the experiment of drawing early attendance with music as an added attraction. Beginning at 8 a. m. there will be orchestra concerts which will continue until it is dark enough to show pictures.

Mogler said the change in the time schedule would not be felt so keenly in the central West End as there is a greater proportion of persons there whose business does not require early rising.

The West End Lyric, the Pageant and the New Grand Central are West End theaters which have special cooling devices. They will endeavor to run their indoor theaters throughout the summer. The same management controls the West End Lyric and the Lyric Skydome. The experiment of giving the first show at the theater and the second at the skydome will be tried.

As usual, the greater number of neighborhood indoor theaters in other sections of the city will be closed for the summer as it has been found impossible to operate them in hot weather without cooling devices.

The principal downtown theaters—the Lyric, Royal, Strand and Central— will be kept open all summer, as they are cooled artificially.

The experiment of giving the first show indoors and the second in the adjoining airdome is being tried by five combination theaters in North and South St. Louis. Even with the present moderately warm temperature the indoor attendance is small.

KAISER'S MESSAGES ON PEACE WITH RUMANIA

Thanks and "Joyful Satisfaction" Expressed in Notes to Hertling and Kuehlmann.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, May 8 (By A. P.).—Emperor William replied to Chancellor von Hertling's congratulations on the conclusion of peace between Germany and Rumania, with this message:

"The termination of the state of war in the East fills me also with proud joy and gratitude. Thanks to God's gracious help the German people, with never failing patriotism, under brilliant military leadership and with the assistance of strong diplomacy, are fighting step by step for a happy future.

"I cannot but convey my thanks on this occasion to you and also to your collaborators. God will help us to pass through the struggle which the hostile attitude of the Powers still under arms against us, has forced us to continue and to conclude."

Emperor William, in a telegram to Dr. Richard von Kuehlmann, the German Secretary for Foreign Affairs, said:

"The conclusion of peace with Rumania gives me an opportunity of expressing my joyful satisfaction that peace has now been given to the entire Eastern front.

"May rich blessings descend on the peoples concerned from the resumption of the peaceful labor to which they can now devote themselves.

"I thank you and your collaborators for the work done in loyal cooperation with our allies, and I confer on you as a sign of my appreciation, the Order of the Royal Crown of the First Class."

Chancellor von Hertling's telegram to the Emperor read:

"With the conclusion of peace with Rumania the state of war on the entire Eastern front has been terminated. Under your majesty's firm and sacred leadership and the devoted readiness and self-sacrifice of the entire German nation, especially its defensive forces commanded by their glorious Generals, a success has been gained, the greatness of which can only be appreciated to its full extent by the coming generation.

"On this occasion I ask your majesty graciously to accept my most respectful congratulations. They are characterized by feelings of great gratitude for that which has been achieved by the grace of God and by the unshaken confidence that on all other battlefields the war will end in victory for our just cause."

War Wipes Out Much of German Aristocracy.

COPENHAGEN, May 8. (Special Cable).—The Lokal Anzeiger said Monday that many very ancient families of the lower Saxon nobility of Bremen and the Duchy of Bremen have passed out as a result of war. The last two Van der Becks, the three last members of Von Schalenwedes and six of the Leutzkens have been killed. These losses in only a small part of the German aristocracy prove the general extent of the losses.

Rumania and Teutons to Publish Peace Treaty.

AMSTERDAM, May 8 (By A. P.).—The peace treaty between Rumania and the Central Powers, which according to an official dispatch from Bucharest, was signed Monday, will be published at an early date. It will be known as the "Peace of Bucharest."

TANK 'BRITANNIA' HAS RECORD AS A FIGHTER

Captain of British "Bus," Here, Tells How It Performed During Battle of Loos.

Cap. Richard Haigh and eight other members of the crew of the British tank "Britannia" arrived in St. Louis this morning. The tank, which Capt. Haigh calls "the old bus," will arrive tonight and will be exhibited on the streets for several days, in connection with British-Canadian recruiting and the war savings stamp campaign.

Capt. Haigh told reporters of the effectiveness of the Britannia's machine guns in disposing of a German counter attack at Loos. He and a crew were at that time in the Britannia.

Tank Has Fighting Record.

"We were in a valley, ahead of our troops," he said, "and the boche was on a hill. The Germans were counter attacking, after we had attacked successfully. Two waves of infantry charged down the hill. Our gunners opened on them with the machine guns. The Germans were wiped out completely, like that," and the officers made a gesture indicating speed and completeness.

When asked whether the tanks were considered a safe place, Capt. Haigh replied, "My God, no." The chief feeling of the tank fighter, he said, is that of being cooped up in a steel box. "And it is most unpleasant," he commented. "You do not know what is going on, except straight in front of you, and you have no idea when a shell may drop on you."

However, Capt. Haigh did not wish to be understood as saying that war is an exciting affair. "War is monotonous," he declared. "It is a dull life, with little bursts of excitement at times.

"My most exciting experience in tank warfare," he said, when pressed for an anecdote, "was at Arras in April of last year. The Germans were closely packed ina section of trench about 300 yards long, bomb-proofed in on both sides, and were holding off our infantry with machine guns. We crawled in behind, and right up to the trench, our machine guns pointing directly at them. Our Sergeant climbed to the top of the tank and put his head out of the manhole.

"And They Came Out."

"'Come out, you dirty beggars,' he said. And they came out, with hands stretched toward heaven. We told them to go back to the British lines and find the concentration camp, and they went. You don' have to take them back. They go by themselves. And our men give them cigarettes and biscuits."

Capt. Haigh doubts whether most soldiers feel the fierce joy that many writers have described in going "over the top." He rather thinks the men hate it. Anyone who talks about a fondness for this experience is, he says, usually dispensing "hot air."

The other members of the crew who will man the tank during its stay here are Lieut. Rolph, Sergts. Blunt and Burnside, Corporal Jagger, Lance Corporal Brumham and Gunners Seville, Bailey and Alderman. They are stopping at the Missouri Athletic Association.

GIRL, 5, FALLS FROM AUTO AND IS CUT ABOUT THE HEAD

Man Hits Fire Plug, Breaking Off Cap, and Is Deluged With Water.

Ivy Toler, 5 years old, of 2109 Mullanphy street, fell from an automobile in which she was riding with her aunt, Mrs. Clara Broadway, 707 North Eighteenth street, when a door against which the child was leaning opened as the machine crossed Twentieth street at Washington avenues, yesterday afternoon. She was cut about the head and face.

ASSESSOR CALLED PERSISTENT FOE OF EFFICIENCY BOARD

The Efficiency Board issued today a statement in answer to criticism by Assessor Wollbrinck of the eligibles sent to him by the board for deputy assessors. The board declares that Wollbrinck has persistently opposed selection of his appointees from the eligible list, and has sought opportunities to discredit the work of the board.

The examination prepared by three experts, according to the statement, was submitted to Wollbrinck, and was approved by him. In answer to Wollbrinck's assertion that a majority of the eligibles were incompetent, he is reminded that some of them were former district assessors and served under him when he was chief deputy assessor.

The answer to Wollbrinck's criticism of the writing of the applicants is that the examination was for district assessors, and not clerks, and that, furthermore, a comparison of the handwriting of the applicants with that of Wollbrinck gives most of the men the best of the argument.

PLANS FOR 2 OR 3 INQUIRIES INTO AIRCRAFT OUTPUT

Department of Justice Begins Work Coincident With Announcement That Senate Will Reopen Investigation.

PRESIDENT UNDECIDED ON SQUIER REQUEST

Feeling in War Department That Executive Will Rule Against Inquiry by Military Court.

WASHINGTON, May 8 (By A. P.). —Plans are under way today for two and possibly three separate investigations of aircraft production.

The Department of Justice inquiry ordered by President Wilson was begun under the direction of Assistant Attorney-General William L. Frierson, who was appointed for the task yesterday after Attorney-General Gregory had conferred with the President. Frierson will be assisted by other lawyers of the department and special agents of the Bureau of Investigation and will have to aid him the report of the President's special committee headed by H. Snowden Marshall. One of the first steps of Frierson will be to examine the report submitted to the President by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, and call upon Borglum for evidence to support his charges of graft and pro-German intrigue.

Coincident with the conference which resulted in the appointment of Frierson, Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, chairman of the Senate Military Committee, announced that the committee proposed to reopen its airplane inquiry and "put its finger on the man responsible" for deficiencies in the aviation program. Chairman Chamberlain's announcement came after a conference with members of the committee who indicated that a subcommittee to meet in executive session will be appointed to begin work within a week.

President Has Squier Request.

President Wilson still had before him the request of Major-General Squier, chief signal officer and former director of army aviation, for an investigation by a military court. Although there is a feeling at the War Department that the charges, reflecting as they do upon the honesty and loyalty of many officers, demand an investigation by the military, some believe that the President will decide that the Department of Justice inquiry is sufficient.

The House Military Committee disposed of the aircraft inquiry yesterday when it heard Secretary Baker and his chief aids for aviation. Members decided that the situation did not call for an investigation.

In addition to outlining the program for the coming year, War Department officials gave the committee an accounting for the $740,000,000 already appropriated for aviation, showing that $207,000,000 actually has been spent, and of the unexpended balance $270,000,000 covers contracts for construction already placed.

Baker Before Committee.

Before the committee in executive session were Secretary Baker, Major-General March, acting chief of staff; Major-General Squier, chief signal officer; Brigadier-General W. L. Kenly, chief of the division of military aeronautics; William C. Potter, chief of the equipment division of the signal corps, and a number of other officers. Mr. Potter, whose examination occupied most of the afternoon session, testified that he knew of no criminal neglect on the part of either the manufacturers or the Government officers, and believed the manufacturers were engaged in a patriotic and honest effort to produce results for the Government.

Secretary Baker said that much of the criticism of the aircraft program has resulted from pro-German propaganda. Members of the committee wanted to know whether German plotting had interfered with production. Baker said he could not say it had. Potter declared material had been destroyed, street cars used in carrying men to the manufacturing plants had been wrecked and sabotage had been practiced, all of which had been attributed to German influence, though no evidence had been produced to prove it.

Replying to a written list of questions that had been prepared by the subcommittee on aviation, Potter gave a detailed statement as to what has been done with the money Congress appropriated last year for army aviation. He said of the $307,000,000 actually spent, $163,000,000 was for airplanes, engines and equipment, including spare parts. About $42,000,000 was spent for construction of hangars and acquisition of aviation fields in this country and $32,000,000 for similar purposes in France. There is $31,000,000 in the hands of disbursing agents, details of which were not reported, and $5,000,000 has been spent for gas for ballons. The balance, he said, had been spent for experimentation and other activities. Further details were given, but at Secretary Baker's request they were treated as military secrets.

Representative Anthony said he had seen a letter stating that during March the German airplanes flew at will and unmolested over the allied lines taking photographs. Squier replied that it still is possible for airplanes of the enemy to fly over the allied lines and take pictures and that it also is possible for the allied planes to do the same work over the German lines.

Liberty Motor Criticised.

Potter said that the French and British Governments, while they were satisfied that the Liberty motor is a good engine and economical in gas and oil, preferred the Bugatti and Hispano-Suiza engines and at the request of the French Government the War Department had cancelled two contracts for the Liberty motor of 5000 each, to manufacture instead the two French types. He said that the Liberty motor is good for the heavier aircraft, such as bombing machines, but that it requires great breadth of wing and is not adaptable to the swifter craft that go after the enemy's fast air raiders. He added that the Liberty motor is still "in process of refinement and perfection," that it is an especially good engine for certain classes of air work and that the Government is continuing with the Liberty motor manufacturing program for the heavier work. The French Government wants 10,000 of them.

If there is any criticism to be made of the aircraft situation, Potter told the committee, it is that too much time may have been wasted in experimenting with the development of a new, single type of engine, taking up time that could have been used in getting better results from existing engine types. He said aircraft progress has been obstructed by lack of sufficient spruce and that of the spruce that was obtained for air machines in this country four-fifths was shipped over to the allies, leaving only one-fifth for the American airplane manufacture. Since Gen. Foch had become generalissimo he explained he presumed that the French have supplied adequate airplanes all along the front.

Representative Kahn of California, ranking Republican member, said after the hearing that Potter's explanation was satisfactory. He added that he was satisfied that no criminality existed and that while the motors have not been produced on schedule time the delay resulted chiefly from changes in plans and from refusal of cobelligerents to agree on them promptly.

Representative Shallenberger, Nebraska, Democrat, said he believed the explanation satisfied the entire committee. "We realize," he said, "that the expenditure of money provided by Congress last year has not resulted in production of as many combat planes as we had expected. The production capacity of the country, however, is now ready for the production of airplanes. The committee believes Mr. Potter's statement that production will now keep pace with the demand."

The Attorney-General spent an hour with the President after the Cabinet meeting.

Noted American Flyer Who Is Missing After Fight Over German Lines

CAPT. JAMES NORMAN HALL.

CAPTAIN HALL MISSING AFTER AIRPLANE FIGHT

Three Americans on Patrol Attacked by Four Enemy Fliers and Hall After Dive Last Seen Trying to Land.

OPPONENT TOOK DESPERATE CHANCE

By Almost Unheard of Maneuver German Flyer Was Able to Riddle Bottom of American's Machine.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Tuesday, May 7 (By A. P.).—"Jimmy" Hall is gone, and the whole American air service is mourning his loss. All are wondering whether he was killed or was able to bring his machine safely to earth after his battle in the air over Pagny-Sur-Moselle. Capt. Hall was popular throughout the army and had won admiration by his daring, coolness and skill in handling his machine.

The Captain's flying companions are all certain he would have knocked out his opponent had it not been for a maneuver unheard of so far as American and French pilots in this section of France are concerned. It has been considered dangerous to the last degree to bring up a machine sharply from a downward plunge, because the strain is almost certain to cause the collapse of some vital part. The German aviator when Capt. Hall was pursuing, being hard pressed, adopted this desperate expedient to escape death and won. He was thus enabled to pour a stream of bullets into the bottom of Hall's machine.

The Captain's companions waited for several hours after the fight for him to return before giving him up for lost.

They felt certain unless some serious accident had occurred he would return, notwithstanding the fact that he was seen to plunge toward the earth.

Capt. Hall, with two others, was patrolling yesterday between St. Mihiel and Pont-a-Mousson. When they were over Pagny-sur-Moselle, four enemy Albatross airplanes painted with black and white stripes were seen. The American attacked. Capt. Hall singling out one of the enemy and driving him downward while firing with his machine gun.

The pair made a spiral dive from 6000 meters to 4000, when the German suddenly reversed his machine and started to rise. In a quick turn he poured a deadly stream of machine gun bullets into the bottom of Hall's machine. Capt. Hall promptly came out of the spiral and made a dive for the earth. He was last seen attempting to complete this maneuver.

Enemy Machines Drop.

Meantime the enemy machines that the other Americans had engaged dropped toward the ground. It is unknown what happened to them, but two of them apparently were in distress. No credit for a victory is given the Americans, because official verification of the destruction of the enemy was impossible.

Capt. Hall's machine had painted on its side the first American airplane insignia to appear on the battle line in the form of a "hat in the ring" sign showing a starry striped high hat, usually pictured on Uncle Sam, surrounded by a golden ring.

Despite the bad weather German machines were out in force. Alarm after alarm was answered by the Americans. Lieut. Cunningham engaged one machine until four of the enemy joined in. The Lieutenant kept up the fight until his machine gun jammed, when he returned to the American lines with 10 bullet holes in his plane.

The usual German game was to have a small number of planes appear near the American lines, while a reserve of four or five machines remain out of sight until the Americans came into action.

The reserves would then swoop down in an attempt to wipe out the Americans. The American aviators met this by answering alarms with twice the number of machines it was reported the Germans had.

American aviators used Nieuport pursuit machines as their fighting weapons. The Americans engaged in photography and artillery regulating work also had to fight. Two Americans protecting a photographing machine were attacked by two Germans. The fight lasted for half an hour and ended when one German went wobbling to the ground about three kilometers within the German lines. The fight took place about two kilometers (about a mile and a quarter) behind the German positions.

As a result of the activity it is believed the Germans sent some of their best fliers to this sector to attempt to annihilate the American flying force.

Hall, Poet and Author, Former Member of Lafayette Escadrille.

James Norman Hall is 31 years old. He is a son of Mrs. A. W. Hall of Colfax, Io., and was graduated from Grinnell (Iowa) College. He enlisted in the British army a month after the war started. In November, 1915, he returned to the United States on account of the illness of his father and went back to France the following July, enlisting in the French air service. He was a member of the famous Lafayette Escadrille and distinguished himself for daring and efficiency.

In June, 1917, he attacked eight German planes at an altitude of 10,000 feet. He was shot through the shoulder and fell about 600 feet into the French first-line trenches. He won the croix de guerre and was decorated with the medaille militaire and the American Distinguished Service Cross. Hall is a poet and author of "Kitchener's Mob."

HAVE DARK HAIR AND LOOK YOUNG

Nobody can Tell when you Darken Gray, Faded Hair with Sage Tea.

Grandmother kept her hair beautifully darkened, glossy and attractive with a brew of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect. By asking at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, all ready to use, at very little cost. This simple mixture can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says everybody uses Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied—it's so easy to use, too. You simply dampen a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, it is restored to its natural color and looks glossy, soft and beautiful. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—ADV.

555 DRAFTED MEN GO TO BARRACKS IN AUTOS SUNDAY

Arrangements Being Made for Escort of Mounted Police, Six Bands and Relatives in Parade.

OWNERS TO BE ASKED TO DONATE CARS

Opportunity for Demonstration in Honor of St. Louisans Going to War; Some Men Who Will Go.

Arrangements are being made to take 555 St. Louis drafted men to Jefferson Barracks next Sunday afternoon in automobiles, escorted by a patriotic parade, in which mounted police, friends and relatives of the men and six bands will participate.

These drafted men are under orders to go to the Barracks Sunday, and the Government had arranged to carry them in a special train. Lieutenant-Colonel McCord, executive officer for the draft, has given permission, however, for the men to be taken in automobiles provided the arrangements are carried out smoothly and the authorities at Jefferson Barracks do not object.

Joseph Ebeling, secretary of the Real Estatae Exchange and chief clerk of the Twenty-first Ward Draft Board, and Shepard R. Evans, Government attorney for the draft in the Twenty-third Ward, are at the head of the movement.

Cars to Be Donated.

The testative plans call for the assembly of the drafted men at some convenient place, probably Grand avenue and Lindell boulevard, or King's highway and Lindell. About 200 automobiles will be required and owners will be asked to donate their cars. The Musicians' Union has promised to give the services of six bands.

The plan wa sundertaken by Ebeling and Evans with the double purpose of saving the Government the cost of a special train to transport the men and of giving the relatives and friends a suitable opportunity to honor the prospective soldiers with a patriotic demonstration. Ebeling and Evans went to Jefferson Barracks today to confer with the authorities there concerning the plan.

More Names Announced.

All the ward boards of St. Louis have selected the men they will send Sunday. The names of the 72 men selected by the Thirteenth, Twenty-third and Twenty-seventh Wards were announced today. The selections from all other wards were printed in the Post-Dispatch in two installments, last Sunday and yesterday. Following are those announced today:

JUICE OF LEMONS! HOW TO MAKE SKIN CLEAR, SOFT, WHITE

Girls! Prepare this lotion and massage face, neck, arms and hands. It's cheap!

By all means, girls, prepare this lemon lotion to keep your skin flexible and young looking. You will soon realize that true loveliness does not mean the powdery-look or waxen colorlessness of some hot-house flower, but is typified by the velvety softness of your skin, your peach-like complexion and rosy-white hands.

At the cost of a small jar of ordinary cold cream one can prepare a full quarter pint of the most wonderful lemon skin bleach, skin softener and complexion beautifier, by squeezing the juice of two fresh lemons into a bottle containing three ounces of orchard white. Care should be taken to strain the juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. It really will bleach and remove such blemishes as pimples, freckles and tan and is the ideal skin softener, smoothener and beautifier because it sorbs readily and is not sticky or greasy.

Just try it! Get three ounces of orchard white at any pharmacy and two lemons from the grocer and make up a quarter pint of this sweetly fragrant lotion and apply it daily to the face, neck, arms and hands. It really does soften, freshen, bleach and bring out the roses and hidden beauty of any skin. It is simply marvelous to smoothen rough, red hands.—ADV.

SEEKS BARBERS' TREASURER IN ORDER TO AUDIT HIS BOOKS

President of State Board of Examiners Says Man Reported Missing Should Have About $5000 in His Hands.

An inquiry has been instituted by A. F. Hinrichs, president of the State Board of Barber Examiners, in an effort to find F. M. Kirby of Joplin, treasurer of the board, and his books, for the purpose of auditing the books. Information received by Hinrichs from Joplin yesterday was that Kirby had not been in his office for three weeks and that he had vacated the house he had occupied.

Hinrichs several days ago called on Assistant Circuit Attorney Baer and requested that action be taken against Kirby, but Baer ruled that any action must be taken at Joplin, as all the board's moneys were sent there. According to Hinrichs there should be about $5000 in the hands of the treasurer, but he said a $40 check recently was protested, and that a demand made by him on Kirby to produce the books for an audit had not been answered.

Kirby was appointed a member of the board by Gov. Gardner last August. On Nov. 1, when he became treasurer a balance of $2395.85 was turned over to him.

J. A. REARDON, FESTIVAL WORKER, DIES AT HOME

Glue Manufacturer Superintended Buying of Gifts for Children for 18 Years.

James A. Reardon, who for the past 18 years superintended the purchase of gifts for the thousands of children who attended the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival, died yesterday at his home, 5158 Cabanne avenue, from pneumonia, folowing a stroke of apoplexy. He was 58 years old and was president of the Reardon Manufacturing Co., makers of glue.

Reardon was a worker in the Christmas Festival from the time of its inception, in 1900, and manifested the greatest enthusiasm in the work. It was his annual task to contract for the large orders of gifts, so that most of his work was done in advance of the Festival, but he was always there, standing near the door and making sure that every child got his or her equal share of the toys and other articles provided.

He was a man of literary taste, and took particular pleasure in collecting old and rare books. Many of the books in his large library relate to the history and literature of Ireland.

He took a leading part in bringing the Irish exhibit to the St. Louis World's Fair of 1904. This exhibit was housed in the Irish Village, at the head of the Pike, the chief amusement street.

His entire business career was in St. Louis, he having come here in 1878 from Quincy, Ill. He was first porter in a wholesale glue house, then shipping clerk, salesman, manager, and, since 1891, president of his own company. He was a former president of the Latin-American Club and of the Furniture Board of Trade.

Mrs. Reardon, three sons and three daughters survive him. One of his sons is Lieut. James A. Reardon Jr. The funeral will be held tomorrow at St. Mark's Catholic Church, followed by internment in Calvary Cemetery.

WOMEN SAFE ROBBERS' 'LOOKOUT'

Pair Seen in Front of Grocery From Which $31 Is Stolen.

Two women acted as "lookout" for safe robbers who stole $31.31 from the strong box in a Kroger grocery at 1902 California avenue yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Veronica Berlyn of 2753 Geyer avenue, after the theft had been reported, told the police that she saw the women in front of the store and that they were joined by two men who had been in the store. The place had been closed for the afternoon and the robbers "jimmied" their way in. They used an explosive to open the safe and muffled the sound with wrapping paper.

15,000,000 Pounds of Flour for France.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 8 (By A. P.).—Approximately 15,000,000 pounds of wheat flour held by various firms and individuals throughout California, will be assembled immediately for direct shipment to France, Ralph P. Merritt, Federal Food Commissioner for California, has announced. This represents California's surplus over the official allotment of six pounds a month a person.

BEGIN HOT WATER DRINKING IF YOU DON'T FEEL RIGHT

Says glass of hot water with phosphate before breakfast washes out poisons.

If you wake up with a bad taste, bad breath and tongue is coated; if your head is dull or aching; if what you eat sours and forms gas and acid in your stomach, or you are bilious, constipated, nervous, sallow and can't get feeling just right, begin inside bathing. Drink before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This will flush the poisons and toxins from stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels and cleanse, sweeten and purify the entire alimentary tract. Do your inside bathing immediately upon arising in the morning to wash out of the system all the previous day's poisonous waste, gases and bile before putting more food into the stomach.

To feel like young folks feel; like you felt before your blood, nerves and muscles became loaded with body impurities, get from your pharmacist a quarter pound of limestone phosphate which is inexpensive and almost tasteless, except for a sourish twinge which is not unpleasant. Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. Men and women who are usually constipated, bilious, headachy or have any stomach disorder should begin this inside bathing before breakfast. They are assured they will become real cranks on the subject shortly.—ADV.

CONCRETE SHIP YARDS FOR SOUTH AND EAST

Building on Pacific to Be Extended to Atlantic and Gulf Coast Ports.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Concrete shipbuilding will soon be under way at a number of plants on the Atlantic and Gulf coasts. While the necessary legislation has not been enacted by Congress, it is certain to become a law.

A bill appropriating $50,000,000 for this experiment in shipbuilding is being formulated by the Senate Commerce Committee. One bill of this nature was introduced some weeks ago by Senator McCumber, but it will be supplanted by an administration measure, which will probably be introduced by Senator Fletcher within a few days. Secretary McAdoo's return has been awaited before the final draft of the measure received approval.

The officials of the Emergency Fleet Corporation are sanguine of the success of this type of ship. The Faith, a 4500-ton concrete ship, built on the Pacific Coast, is now on its maiden voyage to Vancouver.

It is proposed to build a large number of tankers of concrete, and one yard has already been located at Wilmington, N. C. Other locations for shipyards will be announced as soon as the bill is passed.

MAN SHOOTS WIFE, ESCAPES

John A. Ilges Jr. of 5026 Thrush avenue, a blacksmith, fired several shots at his wife, Frances, in the kitchen of their home early today, one of the bullets taking effect in her left shoulder. He escaped. Mrs. Ilges was taken to St. Luke's Hospital by her daughter, Mrs. Margaret Preston, 5020 Thrush avenue.

The police were informed of the shooting and resumed a search for Ilges which they started last Saturday, when Ilges fired a shot at his son-in-law, Oscar Preston, with whom he had quarreled.

Girls—Do You Know Why Your Hair is Ugly?

It's amazing how much pretty hair does towards producing the appearance of youth and beauty so much desired by women of all ages. It's really a simple matter for any woman to merit this praise since radiant hair is only a matter of care.

When your hair becomes faded, dry, streaked and scraggly, when it falls out badly and new hair cannot grow, the roots must be vitalized and properly nourished. To do this quickly, safely and at little expense, there is nothing so effective as Parisian sage (liquid form) which you can get at Judge & Dolph Drug Co. and all good drug and toilet counters.

It's guaranteed to abolish dandruff—stop scalp itch and falling hair, and promote a new growth or money refunded. It's in great demand by discriminating women because it makes the hair so soft, lustrous, easy to arrange attractively and appear heavier than it really is.

A massage with Parisian sage is a real delight—easy to use, not sticky or greasy, and delicately perfumed—an antiseptic liquid free from dangerous ingredients, and guaranteed not to color the hair or scalp. If you want good looking hair and plenty of it use Parisian sage. Don't delay—begin tonight—a little attention now insures beautiful hair for years to come.—ADV.

Mill at Barracks Turns Out Soldiers Rapidly

Varied Array of Drafted Men Go in at One End of Huge U and All Come Out at Other End Clad in Khaki.

There has been created at Jefferson Barracks a great, smoothly-running mill, into which drafted civilians pour, and out of which emerge soldiers. The mill is also a huge separator, that unerringly divides fit and unfit.

The mill is in the shape of a huge U. Into one horn of the U can be seen entering farmer boys, mechanics, clerks and rich men's sons. Their dress is as varied as the localities from which they come. Stylish spring suits mingle indiscriminately with overalls and jumpers. Modish hats, battered caps and derbies bob up and down together as they pour into the mouth of the mill.

But the stream emerging from the other horn of the U is different. It is composed solely of men dressed in the same kind of khaki shirts and breeches, the same kind of service hats, the same shoes and leggins, and each carries the same kind of a blue bag, filled with precisely the same articles. The distinctions have been erased. There are no more mechanics or clerks; no wealthy or poor—only soldiers.

6500 Handled in 5 Days.

In the five days closing with Monday, 6500 drafted men from Illinois passed through the barracks. All of them have passed through the great machine and have been accepted or rejected. If accepted, they have been outfitted, and all of both classes are gone. There is no delay; drafted men generally go out the third day, including the day of arrival.

Present facilities for handling them are in strong contrast to those of last December, when 16,000 enlisted men were billeted in vacant buildings, the Y. M. C. A., hotels, and wherever room could be found for them. The hills around the barracks now are cities of white tents, that, with the new cantonment buildings, are ample for the average of 5000 men who are there.

The accumulation of men will be cleared out today and tomorrow, but the stream will start again Friday, when 2163 drafted men from Missouri begin to arrive. Among these will be 555 St. Louisans, who will go to the barracks Sunday.

The scene around the barracks is a moving one. Groups of men in civilian clothes are constantly arriving; men in uniforms continuously pour out on to the parade ground with their blue sacks on their shoulders; occasionally a bugle call blares across the parade ground, which, with the constant tramping of men, is strikingly reminiscent of the "Gathering of the Clans" scene in "The Birth of a Nation."

About 13,000 drafted men from Illinois, Missouri, Kansas and Iowa are to be sent through the barracks in the two-week period ending May 15. They are shipped out to fill up army divisions in training camps. They do not receive any training at the barracks.

Processes in Transformation.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, to get first-hand information on the transition of a drafted civilian into a soldier, yesterday went through the entire process, from the moment of arrival to that of departure, just as a drafted man would do.

When the "drafts," as they are called, arrive in the railroad yards, they are divided into groups of 70, each group being placed in charge of a non-commissioned officer. Thence they go to the receiving barracks, where they undress. A preliminary physical examination is immediately given them, to discover contagious diseases. The dressing room constitutes the mouth of the first horn of the U.

Each man takes a shower bath, and his number is marked on his chest with blue chalk. He continues down the side of the U, and his name, age, etc., are written on the record card which he carries.

At the next stop (if a pause of 30 seconds may be called a stop) a young wizard in khaki weighs the drafted man, measures his height, his chest and counts the number of missing teeth, and sends him on down the line with a slap on the back before the bewildered "draft" grasps what it is all about.

Scars Quickly Detected.

However, the next station has another surprise.

"Any scars?" snaps a tired looking individual behind a table. The reporter answered that there were none.

"Whatthell's that on your left temple? Right arm? Right leg? Left leg?" flashed back the inquisitor, and in less than a minute the incoherent one is again on his way, now holding a diagram showing the nature and location of five tiny scars that he had forgotten he ever had.

Then, as he plods on, wondering where this scar-detector had seen him before, his chin is firmly grasped by a young dentist, his mouth is opened, his teeth again inspected, and diseases of the mouth, if any, recorded on his card by the assisting clerk.

He has reached the first elbow in the U, in the curve of which the specialists lie in wait. Next his arm is grabbed, and a vaccination site is sponged off with alcohol by a young man in a white apron, who does nothing else. The vaccination follows immediately, consuming perhaps 15 seconds, and he passes on into a dark room. Here a blond giant looks into his throat, his ears and his nose while he says: "Sorry if I twist your head off, but we're rushed," and on he goes, with more damning facts on the record card.

The whispering test for the hearing, and the chart-reading one for sight, which follows, are familiar to many, but not the ordeal which is next on the program. The latter is called "the neurologist's test," but a [illegible] evidently elucidated in a stage whisper at the door that "this is where they find out if you are nutty."

No Place for Secrets.

The neurologists' room is no place for a man with family secrets. The skeleton will be dragged from the closet, weighed, measured, ticketed and put in a filing cabinet where all the War Department may see. If your father ever was hit on the head and knocked unconscious; if your mother ever fell down the stairs; if you or any of your folks ever had fits, fainting spells or brain fever, the neurologist will find it out.

Nothing is sacred to him. He taps the "draft" on his "crazy bone" with a rubber hammer, and then, after making him shut his eyes, tickles him in the ribs. When this is finished, and the "draft" is feeling that everything about his past, present and future is public property, he passes on to the bone and muscle test.

This consists of nothing much except jumping up and kicking his heels together; wiggling his toes and fingers, flexing his knees and ankles; doing a course of calisthenics, and finally hopping, first on one foot, and then, at a command, on the other, to a distant enclosure known as the "heart and lung room."

"Turn your heads to one side and keep them there until you leave this room, and keep quiet," orders the attendant. "Don't breathe in the doctor's face," he later snaps at a refractory one, and adds: "That's why you keep your [illegible] is turned."

Goes to Specialist.

When all leaky valves and wheezy pipes have been catalogued, the "draft" goes to the "bone specialist," who examines for deformities due to previous fractures or wrenches. There is one more physical test, and when the now hopeless "draft" is wondering whether he will be disgracefully rejected or shot at sunrise, he is pulled up before a small table, his record card inspected, marked "accepted," and he passes on to where a company of clerks are making out service records.

While he waits his metal identification tags, bearing his name and serial number, are stamped by a machine, and he passes on for the final "shot in the arm." This is the inoculation for typhoid, and consists of an injection at the back of the right shoulder. Another assistant swipes a stick wrapped in iodine-soaked gauze across the sore spot.

If, however, the man has been rejected instead of accepted, he is not given this inoculation. Instead, the assistant makes a yellow streak down his back with the iodine swab, to indicate that he is not to be given a uniform, for the outfitting room is next. There is no significance in the yellow streak, it may be added.

Gets His Uniform.

The "draft" is now back to the mouth of the second horn of the U. Here he gets his uniform, hat, mess kit and blankets. He also gets his insurance policy, if he desires. Every one of the 1431 men accepted Monday took out $10,000 life insurance policies; that is, an aggregate of $14,310,000.

The only thing left is to either throw into the reclamation box or express home his civilian clothes, and the drafted man emerges at last, having spent from an hour and a half to three hours in the mill.

Through this process long lines of white, young bodies shuffle ceaselessly, apparently without end, day after day. The line never ends or changes. It is the same on Sundays and week days. The clans keep gathering; the long, white lines keep shuffling through the mill, and ranks of khaki-clad soldiers continue marching away to the train, on the west bank of the Mississippi River.

ALLIED LINE WILL HOLD, WINSTON CHURCHILL SAYS

Predicts Victory When Americans Reach France in Force Later in Year.

LONDON, May 8 (By A. P.).—The Anglo-French front in France will stand firm and husband its strength throughout the summer while waiting for aid to come from the United States, says Winston Spencer Churchill, Minister of Munitions, in reply to a resolution of the executive of the National Brass Workers and Metal Mechanics Union.

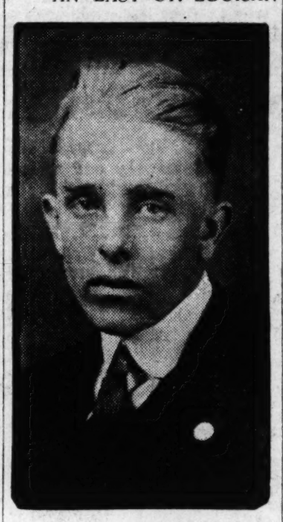

"Although the German commanders declare their readiness to sacrifice a million men, or, if need be, a million and a half, the French and British armies will not be overcome," Churchill says. "They will maintain a firm front throughout the summer, using their deadly weapons upon the German masses and husbanding their own strength.

"Meanwhile, our kith and kin from the United States are coming to our aid as fast as ships can steam, our navy is coping with the submarine and our men see mastery of the air in view. If we hold, we win."

HITS U-BOAT COMMANDER WITH HIS FIST AND ESCAPES

Captain of Torpedoed Steamer, a Captive, Sprang Into Sea and Was Picked Up by a British Destroyer.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 8 (By A. P.).—A solid British fist and the opportune arrival of an allied destroyer saved Capt. D. J. McDonald, skipper of the three-masted schooner John G. Walter, now at the bottom of the Atlantic, from being carried a prisoner to Germany in a submarine.

Capt. McDonald told the story on his arrival here on an American steamship. The U-boat had fired a torpedo into the schooner, on her way from a Canadian port to Europe. The submarine commander had ordered Capt. McDonald, whose home is on Prince Edward Island, into the undersea craft. While some of the German crew were busy on the sinking schooner arranging to transfer stores needed by the U-boat, the two captains stood in the unclosed conning tower as spectators.

"I'm going to take you to Germany for a spell and see how you like it," the German commander informed the Briton.

"Are you?" inquired Capt. McDonald, whereupon he swung his fist to the German's jaw and as the U-boat commander fell, stunned, McDonald climbed out of the tower and dived into the sea. He swam deep to avoid being shot. There was wreckage floating and good fortune brought McDonald to the surface behind it so that he was hidden from the sight of the enraged submarine crew. During their search for him a destroyer hove in view and the German hastily abandoned the schooner and the U-boat fled.

M'ADOO SPONSOR FOR RAILROAD WAGE INCREASE

Director-General Appointed Board Which Now Recommends Advances Totaling More Than $300,000,000.

RAISE TO AVERAGE ABOUT $150 YEARLY

Amount Will Be Distributed on a Percentage Basis, However, Instead of Being a Flat Advance.

By HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The Post-Dispatch is able to present herewith an authoritative outline of the work and conclusions of one of the most important activities generated by the war—the Railroad Wage Commission, appointed by Director-General of Railroads McAdoo on Jan. 18 of this year.

The investigations and recommendations are embodied in a report of about 200 pages which was delivered to McAdoo yesterday. He is giving the subject immediate and personal attention. From his deep interest in the matter and his knowledge of the painstaking care with which the members of the inquiry body proceeded, the belief is generally accepted here that he will adopt the findings in their entirety and put them into immediate execution.

That this is the program which will be followed is made the more probable through the fact that the Director-General himself was the sponsor of the wage inquiry, the railway employes having been promised full justice if they awaited the outcome. Further, they were assured that the increases would be retroactive as of Jan. 1 this year.

Summary of Findings.

Relying upon the Director-General's word, they waited patiently, and now they are to receive their reward, which may be summarized thus:

The commission recommends that the railways employes, who in December, 1915, numbered 1,929,399, be given wage increases amounting to a figure in excess of $300,000,000 per year. This sum represents an average individual raise of about $150 yearly. The increases are applied, however, not on a flat basis, but on a system of percentages which runs from a maximum of 45 per cent down to 4½ per cent, the heaviest increases going to those earning less than $55 monthly, in which class more than 65 per cent of all the workers are included.

That the Wage Commission had reached the conclusions which it now formally presents was told exclusively in these dispatches printed in the Post-Dispatch on March 22. At that time it was said that the wage increase to be granted would run between $300,000,000 and $350,000,000. The final sum lies between these two figures, as the inquiry was based upon the number of employes in December, 1915, which number has been increased in the two and a half years that have also elapsed.

In the Post-Dispatch's account at that time it was said: "In the fight for justice against Germany, America is not forgetting justice to her own people. To the untold millions she is pouring out to win the war for a world democracy there is to be added a great sum that shall make more secure for democracy within her own borders."

The committee selected by the Director General consisted of Franklin K. Lane, Secretary of the Interior, who was made chairman; William R. Willcox, who resigned as chairman of the Republican National Committee to undertake the task; J. Harry Covington, Judge of the District of Columbia Supreme Court, and C. C. McChord, member of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Fred W. Lehmann of St. Louis, was made General Counsel, and W. A. Ryan, secretary.

Sitting for 14 Weeks.

The members have been sitting steadily for 14 weeks; they have been aided by a large staff of experts and have had opened to them the researches of the French and British governments, in addition to which they have tapped other sources of information never before employed in such a connection.

In the report of the railroad wage commission, which bears the date of April 30, 1918, and which is addressed to the Director-General of Railroads, the commissioners begin thus:

"To make an investigation of the wages and hours of the more than 2,000,000 railroad workers now in the employ of this Government has been a matter of engrossing interest.

"To ask of a man 'What wages should you in justice receive?' you ask perhaps the profoundest of all human questions. He is at once compelled to an appraisement of his own contribution to the general good. He must look not selfishly on his own material needs, but take a fair view of the needs of those dependent upon him. He must go into the whole involved problem of his relationship with his fellows, and to answer the question aright he must, in the end, come to a judgment which will be nothing less than a determination on what policy or plan of wages adjustment will make for the permanent well-being of the state.

"We have searched for no such ultimate answer if there can be one, but our investigation sought to reveal the insistent problems that confront these workers, and such recommendations as we make are the practical answers to this immediate and direct question: 'What does fair dealing at this time require shall be done for these people who are rendering an essential service to this nation in the practical conduct of this industry?'".

"Eat Old Potatoes Now or Toss Them to Dump," Says Hoover Aid Here

Food Bureau Director of Public Information for St. Louis Explains Why "Potatriot Is a Good Patriot" Right Now.

Kenneth G. Carpenter, who has come from Washington to be Director of Public Information for the St. Louis committee of the United States Food Administration and whose first work is the direction of a campaign this week to increase the consumption of potatoes, was asked yesterday to explain why eating potatoes is intimately connected with the national task of winning the war. Carpenter recently has been secretary to Robert S. Brookings of St. Louis, now in Washington as chairman of the Price-Fixing committee of the War Industries Board.

"Many of the effects of the severe weather and railroad paralysis of last week are just becoming apparent," Carpenter said. "Potatoes, from their bulk, require much space in railroad transportation. Consequently potatoes were not moved freely last winter. The result is that on April 1 it was discovered that there were approximately 50,000,000 bushels of potatoes in the country and the new crop season was at hand.

Stock Abnormally Large.

"Normally the stock of potatoes would have been much less. Potatoes begin to sprout and spoil with warm weather. One of two things must happen. The nation must consume the potatoes or toss them to the dump. The latter alternative is manifestly impossible. Food of any description is not to be wasted in wartime. The only other thing to do is to eat the potatoes.

"In one way, the potato surplus is opportune. Potatoes can be made to replace wheat on American tables. Wheat is needed in Europe. One medium-sized potato has the nutriment of a slice of bread. We want every St. Louisan this week when he reaches for a slice of bread to stop, reconsider and take another potato instead. The appetite need not become jaded. One housewife has figured that there are 49 ways of preparing potatoes.

"Nor is the profit one of the present alone. Potato-eating now insures a sizeable potato crop next year. If the farmer's potatoes he now has on hand spoil and are a dead loss, he cannot be justly expected to devote as much acreage or attention to a crop next year. The war needs of the nation demand a good crop. If the farmer's potatoes are eaten, he will be content to hoe potatoes again next year.

"The potatriot is a good patriot."

Carpenter came to St. Louis fresh from a near-up scrutiny of Hoover's 2000-man machine at Washington and is brimful of information to clear up whatever bewilderment has existed in the minds of the housewife and doubts of the good to be accomplished in her strict adherence to Food Administration rules. Many a housewife is puzzled to know why one week she is told that meat can be patriotically eaten and the next week that she must keep it from her table.

The soda dispenser wonders at the rule of May 3 that says that the man who supplies him this fountain syrups can only have 80 per cent of his customary supply of sugar, while the man who supplies the ice cream for the fountain still can get 100 per cent of his needs.

"Hoover Deals With Facts."

"Hoover is not a magician of economics," Carpenter said, "nor is he fasting upon the public some flowery ebullition of his own mind, when he showers the country with rules that tell us how we shall feed ourselves. He is dealing with facts. He is simply trying to keep supply and demand within hailing distance of each other, to make that immutable law do its share of war work.

"Often the exclamation is heard: 'Why do we have to feed the allies?' They got their wheat somewhere else before; never raised it themselves. We've got enough to do to feed our own boys.'

"The doubter usually supplements his exclamation with a statement that there is 'oodles' of wheat in Australia.

"True enough. Australia has a vast surplus of wheat, but Australia is 11,890 miles from the seat of war, and might as well be 100,000, as far as her importance as a food source is concerned.

"The problem that has forced America to be the storehouse of her associates in war is one of shipping. There are not enough ships afloat. Submarines are partly responsible. Ships required to haul that Australian wheat can be better employed in hauling American wheat. A ship, coming and going that long route from Australia, her hold full of wheat and her cabin empty, if employed from an American port, could make three round trips to Europe in the time it takes to make one from Australia. And going from an Atlantic port, her hold would be full of wheat and her decks swarming with soldiers to stop the Kaiser. The same comparison hold for India and South America. A ship used to haul wheat from Buenos Aires could haul twice as much from New York in the same time. Food is essential and food speedily is more essential.

What Led to "Wheatless Days."

"But why does Mr. Hoover keep demanding more and more sacrifice of wheat in our baking?' exclaims the housewife next. 'Why didn't he start using substitutes sooner, if he knew we had to use them?'

"Hoover is not responsible. He was told that America must furnish the allies with 100,000,000 bushels of wheat before the next grop was harvested. He discovered that America had only 20,000,000 bushels above her own needs. Obviously there was only one course. America must lessen her needs. So Hoover proclaimed wheatless days, and had his demand upon the housewife reckoned to produce the needed 80,000,000 bushels saving. Then, about five weeks ago, along came the allies and said, 'We've got to have 160,000,000 bushels instead of the 100,000,000 we told you about,' and it was up to Hoover to find the additional 60,000,000 bushels. Meanwhile the crop season was growing shorter and the time for saving perilously shorter.

"Hoover was much in the fix of the man who apportions his week's salary into daily expenditures, and finds on Saturday morning that he has to buy a new hat for his wife for which he had made no allowance. He cuts all the other items off and buys the hat. Hoover is confronted with saving 60,000,000 bushels of wheat and it is Saturday morning.

"What About Corn?"

"Even if Mrs. Housewife is convinced of the need of saving food, she has another question. 'Why do they send the good wheat to Europe and make us eat corn and other substitutes?' she demands. 'Why not keep our wheat and let them use the corn?'

"There are several reasons why that is unwise. Wheat ships better than corn, takes less room and keeps better. Cornmeal is subject to germination and corn cannot be sent in that form. But corn in any other form would be almost useless in Europe. Europe has no milling equipment to grind corn. European housewives wouldn't know how to cook it if it was ground. Women are tilling the soil in Europe. It would be senseless to say to them: 'Here, you quit raising food till we show you how to make corn fritters.'

"Another reason—40 per cent of the food eaten by the average Frenchman is a wheat product; in Italy it is 60 per cent. In America it is only 9 per cent. It works no hardship to ask an American to do without wheat. It does work a hardship on a Frenchman or an Italian. So wheat is the obvious thing to send.

Little Savings Make Big Totals.

"Mrs. Housewife, if she be slacker, will brush all arguments aside with: 'Well, what little bread we eat won't make any difference.'

"That's fallacious, as we will see in a minute, but even if it were not fallacious, it is no excuse. When a company gets the command to go over the top, the presence of a few slackers who fail to obey is no reason for the whole company laying down. As a matter of fact, the modest saving in the average household does make a great difference. The normal individual consumes 4 pounds of wheat flour every week. If every person in St. Louis complied with the letter of the food administration rules and cut down his wheat ration to 1½ pounds a week, this city alone would effect a saving of about 15,000 bushels of wheat a week.

"Crackers are not consumed in great quantities in any household, yet manufacturers of crackers, by using substitutes for wheat, saved 200,000 barrels of flour in one month.

"'Well,' concludes the scoffer, 'if this wheat saving is so important why doesn't Hoover say we can eat only so much?'

"Hoover answers that question with 'This is a democracy and this is a war that democracy might live.' When Hoover made it known to European Food Administrators that he purposed effecting the saving of wheat that they needed by voluntary sacrifice on the part of the American people, they gazed at him with something akin to horror and felt that they never would get the wheat. Yet Hoover had faith in the American people and they have justified that faith.

Flat Rule Would Be Unfair.

"There were more material reasons why compulsory wheat saving was not desirable. A flat rule making each individual a certain allowance would work an unfair hardship in certain sections. The man at manual labor in the north requires more wheat than his brother in the South. A flat allowance would be followed by righteous discontent.'

"Then the administrative cost of enforcing compulsory saving would have been colossal. The cost in dollars would have been $15,000,000 and the cost in labor, now urgently needed elsewhere, would have been too great.

"As it is, the Food Administration has justified itself admirably. The pre-war price of flour was about $17 a barrel. Two days after Hoover took up his work, he called the millers together and told them that profiteering must not exist at the nation's expense. He laid down laws against re-selling, in accordance with his desire to get all necessities from the producer to the consumer in as straight a line as possible. Flour now is about $9.50 or $10 a barrel, a saving to the American people of $700,000,000 annually. Hoover was given $2,500,000 to run his business, so that he costs the American people about 2½ cents each for one year. Yet in flour alone, he had saved them about $7 apiece.

Affects Rich and Poor Alike.

"Hoover has succeeded also in preventing a condition that would permit the rich man to escape the pinch of saving and let the poor man carry the burden. It is notoriously known that the German rich man can get as much of any article of food as he will pay for.

"That condition is impossible here. Without Hoover, sugar prices would have soared as they have soared in every previous war. If sugar had gone to 40 cents a pound, the exaction from the American people would have been $800,000,000. The poor man would have gone without sugar, the rich man could have wallowed in it if he chose. With Hoover, sugar has been kept within the reach of the poor man and the rich man can get no more than his just share. The rich man has no more chance of getting the last pound of sugar in the United States than the poor man.

Recent orders from Hoover on meat have puzzled many housewives. After getting accustomed to meatless days, the housewife discovered one day that Hoover not only had abolished meatless days, but was giving gentle encouragement to the consumption of meat. To the critical that gave chance for criticism. Yet Hoover was merely meeting a fact as it existed. There was a cogent reason.

Reasons for the Change.

"During the railroad embarrassment, meat was blockaded on the farms. The result was a market shortage, and the necessity of saving if our associates in war were to get their quota. Meatless days came. Then with the end of March, the weather grew fair and the railroad tangle began to untangle, and the farmer began to dump his meat on the market. He dumped it so fast that he clogged the market. Meat came so fast that packers could not handle it. They could not even store it. It could not be shipped abroad, for ships were not in the harbors. Hoover employed his tried tactics of cajoling the law of supply and demand a little more. Meatless days were discarded and meat eating again was a thing to be done in the open.

Orders All Justified.

"Now Hoover is beginning to tighten on meat again. The market has eased. He is counseling moderation in meat eating, with a promise that if moderation is practiced meatless days shall not return.

"So it is that every Hoover order has its justification. Even the incident that puzzled the soda dispenser has its reasonable explanation. Hoover did not want to encourage the consumption of sugar for the making of luxuries, as soda drinks are to be classed. So he cut the syrup makers' supply a bit. The reason he did not cut the ice cream manufacturer's supply is that the ice cream manufacturer uses vast quantities of the farmers' excess summer milk supply. If the making of ice cream were discouraged, the farmer would lose his market and would be prompted to trim his milk herd. The effect would be noticeable when winter approached. Milk would be scarce and another problem would have been created.

"That is all there is to the magic of Hoover—just a little good American judgment, mixed with a faculty for organization and topped with foresight."

EIGHT GENERALS TO TRY GEN. DONNELLY

Personnel of Court Which Will Convene Tomorrow Is Announced.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Brigadier-General Arthur B. Donnelly, of St. Louis, Commander of the 69th Infantry Brigade of the national army, will be tried by a court martial of distinguished Generals on charges said to be based on liquor drinking and card playing with junior officers at Camp Doniphan, Ok.

Gen. Donnelly's command included Missouri and Kansas troops, among them being the former First and Fifth Regiments of the Missouri National Guard.

In an order issued by Secretary of War Baker the members of the court are directed to meet at Governor's Island, N. Y., at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

The court is headed by Major-General J. Franklin Bell, and with the exception of Gen. Bell and Brigadier-General William A. Mann, commanding the Eastern Department, is composed of retired officers. They are: Major-Generals William H. Carter and Hugh L. Scott, Brigadier-Generals Theodore A. Bingham, Montgomery M. Macomb, James Parker and William T. Rossell. Maj. Pudley V. Sutphin is appointed Judge Advocate of the court and Maj. Jackson A. Dykman assistant to the Judge Advocate.

The order does not specifically name Gen. Donnelly as a defendant, but it is known that his case will be one of the most important to be considered by the court. A number of junior officers in his command will be called as witnesses.

When confronted with charges after reaching Camp Mills, Long Island, Gen. Donnelly was asked to resign. He refused to do so and the charges were then formally preferred, necessitating a military trial.

RINGLINGS' CIRCUS "BETTER THAN EVER"

First Outdoor Performance of Year Shows Great Development in Regular Acts.

The Ringling Brothers' Circus went "under the top" yesterday for the first time this season, but, thanks to a long period of indoor preparation and to efficiency of management, the opening performances went as smoothly as though the large army of performers had been following the sawdust trail for many weeks. They seemed thoroughly at home on the big lot at Vandeventer and Laclede avenues, where they will remain until Saturday night, with daily afternoon and evening performances.

"Better than last year" was the verdict of many of the thousands who saw the "world's greatest show" last night. The improvement is manifest, and is due not so much to the addition of new features as to the development of the material at hand.

Equestrian Acts Improved.

This is especially noticeable in the equestrian acts which have been brought to a height of excellence, daring and skill never dreamed of in the "good old days" when it was thought to be marvelous that a man could turn a handspring on the padded back of a slowly galloping draft horse. In this department is the undoubted star, May Wirth, and the picturesque troupe billed as the Five Highlanders. These performers have lifted the equestrian act out of the time-killer class and have made it a real thriller.

The Ringlings have a new star of the first magnitude. This proud eminence is held by a "mite of muscularity," Mlle Leitzel, a living example of the value of physical training for women. Without sacrificing her beauty of feature or grace of movement, she has trained and developed the muscles of her arms and shoulders to such remarkable extent that after going through a flying ring act which in itself would tire an ordinary performer, she is still able to hang by her left hand on a swaying rope and turn 40 rapid "giant swings" with her left arm as a pivot, and then come down smiling to receive the applause of the multitude. From an endurance standpoint it is the most difficult and spectacular feat on the circus bill.

New Opening Spectacle.

The Clarkonians, featuring Ernest Clarke, triple somersault expert, is still the leading aerial trapeze act, but it is closely pressed for honors by the Nelson Troupe of three men and two women.

Three rings and two platforms are in constant use and the show is kept moving so that there are no tiresome waits.

Tight-wire, acrobatic and trapeze acts are so numerous it is impossible to watch them all, to say nothing of the trained animal "stunts" and feats of strength and agility which are always going forward on the platforms.

This year's opening spectacle, "In Days of Old," is beautifully costumed and staged, the incidental ballets being unusually colorful and well trained.

Coal Company Fined.

WASHINGTON, May 8 (By A. P.).—For supplying a Belgian relief steamer and other ships with a grade of coal that exposed them to the submarine menace, instead of smokeless coal, the New York and Philadelphia Coal and Coke Co. has been ordered by the Fuel Administration to contribute $1000 to the Belgian Relief Commission.

No Medicine-Chest Without Its Family Laxative

From the baby to the grandparents a good laxative is the necessary medicine in the little ills. It wards off serious sickness and saves doctor's bills. Many a cold has been prevented from running into grippe and pneumonia by its timely use.

Many a racking headache has been quickly dispelled by it. And it is a laxative rather than a drastic cathartic or purgative that should be in every family medicine-chest, for a laxative can be used at all ages.

Thousands of good American families have for more than a quarter century used a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known to druggists as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It is a laxative-tonic that acts on the bowels and stomach. Infants take it with perfect safety, and it is equally effective for grownups.

Grandparents are now seeing their children give it to their babies. It is excellent for all the family in constipation no matter how chronic, indigestion, wind colic, biliousness, headaches, dyspepsia and similar ills.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

NO INCREASE

In spite of enormous increased laboratory costs due to the War the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sacrificing their profits and absorbing the war taxes, so that this family laxative may remain at the pre-war price of 50c and $1 a large bottle. So sold by druggists for 26 years

SHERIFF ORGANIZING HOME GUARD IN ILLINOIS COUNTY

Instructed by Governor to Prevent Any Attempts at Mob Violence by "Loyalists."

EFFINGHAM, Ill., May 8 (By A. P.).—In a statement issued last night, Martin Jakle, Sheriff of Effingham County, announced that he had been instructed by Gov. Lowden "to organize a company of home guard to prevent any mob action or other outbreaks which might result "from alleged anti-American sentiment." The Sheriff said there had been two outbreaks near Effingham and he purposed to see to it that no more should occur.

Sheriff Jakle, when told that a number of citizens had questioned his statements that a large number of citizens of his county were of German descent and many of them unnaturalized, said he believed that his statement was approximately correct.

WAR WORK TIED UP AT ST. LOUIS CAR PLANT

Federal Investigator Says Pershing Wants Our Airplanes and Gun Carts While Men Are Out.

W. B. Northrop, a Government investigator in the Plant Protection Branch of the Military Intelligence Bureau, inspected the plant of the St. Louis Car Co., 8000 North Broadway, to day, where a strike is on, and addressed a communication to the Post-Dispatch, setting forth his observations on the situation. Northrop said he would report the conditions to his department at Washington.

Northrop's duties consists of inspecting plants with war contracts for causes of impeded production, and to give advice for properly guarding plants and preventing fires. He has been in St. Louis three days engaged in this work at different plants and will depart tonight for Indianapolis.

Investigator's Letter.

His letter follows:

"As a Government investigator interested in the production end of our war supply industries, I am taking the liberty of asking for some space in your valued columns concerning the strike situation at the St. Louis Car Co. This company is now manufacturing large numbers of airplanes, carts for gun and ammunition supplies, special wagons for army machine repairs, freight cars for use in France and other war necessities. All but 10 per cent of the work of the plant is devoted to essential requirements of the United States Government at the front. For some of these supplies, Gen. Pershing has issued urgent cabled requests.

"And yet, when I visited the St. Louis Car Co. plant this morning, I found the plant practically shut down. A walkout had taken place about 10 days ago, without, as I understand it, any previous conference on the part of the men employed in the plant concerning their grievances. I am informed by the plant management that on last Thursday, May 2, certain demands made by a committee representing certain factions of the employes, to the following effect: First, that the company should grant a uniform increase of wages—which the company agreed to at once. Second, that the company should grant a decrease of the working hours. This second request was also agreed to. Third, representatives of the striking faction in the plant also demanded that the company agree to recognize representative committees. The plant management agreed, I am informed, to confer with representatives of its own employes, but not those from outside organizations.

Demands Conceded.

"In view of the fact that all of above demands had been conceded, the management refused to enter into a consultation with outside persons, who appeared to be fomenting rather than ameliorating trouble. Standing on a quibble, the advisers of the employes of the St. Louis Car Co. have placed themselves in the position of stopping production of essential supplies for the front for the sake of enforcing, at the time of a crisis, a point which might be well settled at any other time but in the midst of a war.

"The War Labor Board has appealed to labor throughout the country to hold settlements of all questions in abeyance for the sake of the men on our battle front. Even if the employes of the St. Louis Car Co. were absolutely justified in their attitude, it will be recognized that this is not the time to force an issue in these matters. As everything they have asked has been virtually conceded by the plant, it appears that the striking employes have assumed an extremely unpatriotic attitude.

'An Unfortunate Point.'

"An unfortunate point about this whole matter is that the employes were urged by outside parties to strike and walked out of the plant before they had made any demands either verbal or in writing. The strike occurred on Saturday morning, April 27, at 9 o'clock, and the first call of the committee of the employes on the management was on the following Monday.

"Several days previous to the strike, a committee of nine men, led by George Orris, General Organizer International Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, with an office in Chicago, called upon the plant management, claiming, to be a committee representing all of the employes and desiring to present the demands of these employes. The management made it clear, during a friendly conference lasting over an hour, that it could not consistently deal with that committee, as it did not consist of its employes with whom the company was willing to deal at any time and in any form.

"As the principal demand that stands in the way of a settlement of this strike is that the plant management shall deal with others than its own employes, the following quotation from 'Principles and Policies to Cover Relations Between Workers and Employes in War Industries for the Duration of the War'—issued by the National War Labor Board—might be cited: 'In establishments where union and non-union men and women now work together, and the employer meets only with employes or representatives engaged in said establishments, the continuance of such condition shall not be deemed a grievance.'

'Needed in Nation's Crisis.'

"Not wishing to appear as taking sides with either party in this matter, as my one object is production—production—and more production at a time like this, I am making this appeal to all classes of labor and to all plant managements in St. Louis to submerge their difference at this supreme crisis in the history of our nation.

"Piled on the floors of the 25-acre plant of the St. Louis Car Co. are thousands of aeroplane parts, carts for guns and ammunition, repair trains for our armies abroad—vital necessities for which Pershing's men are waiting, and for the lack of which they may be at this moment dying.

"It is sincerely to be hoped that some means will be found within the next few hours to settle these alleged grievances."

CORD TIRES

You expect more mileage from a Kelly-Springfield Tire. That's why we did not put out this cord tire until we had found out exactly what mileage it would give.

We took 500 Kelly-Springfield Cords and put them on cars loaded to weigh 5200 pounds. We sent those cars out in mid-winter to travel day and night over rough, frozen roads. As thousands after thousands of miles rolled up, the drivers reported back, anxious to quit. We repeated our orders: "Go on till your tires give out." They said, "They won't give out. We can't wear them out." But they did, finally. It took 11,725 miles for rear wheels; 14,000 miles for front wheels, a general average of more than 12,000 miles. It wore out the drivers, wore out the cars, and nearly wore out the roads.

That's why we know that Kelly-Springfield Cords are the greatest improvement since pneumatic tires were invented.

OLDEST PRINTER HERE CELEBRATES BIRTHDAY

J. H. Sycamore, 96, Actively Employed at Trade in St. Louis for 65 Years.

Joseph H. Sycamore, oldest of St. Louis printers, who was actively employed at his trade in this city for 65 years, celebrated his ninety-sixth birthday Monday at the home of his sons, Henry and Joseph F. Sycamore, near Carsonville, St. Louis County.

The aged man talked to a Post-Dispatch reporter of the early St. Louis newspapers, on which he worked as a compositor and of methods of news gathering in the days before the railroad and the telegraph.

He was born in Germany in 1822, and came to this country in 1838, living for a time on a farm on the Missouri River, near Washington, Mo. Then he came to St. Louis, and went to work as a printer on the Evening New Era, of which Charles C. Ramsey and Nathaniel Paschall were publishers.

The Evening New Era plant burned down in 1849, in what Sycamore calls "the big St. Louis fire." In the following year, Ramsey and Thomas Yeatman started a new plant, reviving the Evening New Era and adding a morning paper, the Intelligencer, as a rival to the Republican. In '53 or '54, as he recalls it, the Evening New Era was bought out by the Dispatch, which, in later years, was one of the papers merged into the Post-Dispatch.

News in Mexican War Days.

"William McKee and I used to work together as compositors," Sycamore related, "and we used to carry forms to the press between us, on hand bars. After the fire, McKee and Fishback and Gratz Brown movd the St. Louis Union from Vine street near Second to Fourth and Pine streets, and called it the Democrat. That was in '50 or '51, I think. Later McKee went with Dan Houser to start the Globe, and Fishback, being left alone, sold the Globe to them, making the Globe-Democrat.

"In the Mexican War days," he continued, "the chief means of getting news was to meet steamboats at the levee and get the latest intelligence from their crews and passengers. Westbound caravans were also a source of news from the East. It wasn't until in the '50s that we had the telegraph as a means of supplying news here.

"The first extras, and the first newsboys in St. Louis, were in Civil War times. Before that, there were newsboys on the steamboats, but not on the streets of St. Louis.

"I remember Sam Clemens (Mark Twain), as a reporter on the Evening News, which was run by Ramsey and George R. Budd.

"Mock Funerals" Frequent.

"Mock funerals were considered the proper thing in those times. One of the first public ceremonies I saw in this city was the mock funeral of President William Henry Harrison, which was conducted in the same manner as if his body had been here. Henry Clay was later honored in the same way here.

"I worked with the daily papers until in the early '80s, then went with A. N. Kellogg & Co., later the Western Newspaper Union. I worked with Kellogg 24 years, and retired only 10 years ago."

The aged printer has had eight children, of whom four are living. Of his five grandchildren, two are in the army. Sergt. Vincent Kemp, on furlough from Camp Funston, was at the birthday celebration. Corp. William Jennings Herr is at a camp in Georgia. Sycamore has three great-grandchildren.

LETTER FROM ST. LOUISAN WHO WON MEDAL MILITAIRE

Fred A. Renick, Wounded on April 4, Wrote on March 15 That He Was 15 Miles From Front.

Fred A. Renick, a St. Louis ambulance driver in France, who was decorated with the Medal Militaire, after heroic action, April 4, in which he attempted to convey three wounded men along a shell-swept road until his ambulance was blown to bits and he was maimed for life by an exploding shell, wrote on March 18 to his sister, Mrs. Ruth Voigt of 4276 Arsenal street, as follows:

"We are now stationed 15 miles from the front and will probably work from this town. We have not done any work yet, as the division that we will work with is at present resting; consequently, we are, too. However, we expect to get into active service soon.

"This place is not a camp, just a little village of probably 200 inhabitants, and apparently centuries old. Nothing modern at all. We are living in the streets like gypsies, sleeping in our ambulances and eating in them, too. We have our own kitchen at the end of the street. It's great fun and we like it very much. The weather is ideal.

"Our trip since leaving America has been like a wonderful vacation and couldn't have been improved upon much had we had the planning ourselves. Of course, there were a few discomforts and inconveniences, but they were to be expected. Our drive from where I last wrote you was through some of the prettiest scenery I have ever seen, and I enjoyed it immensely.

"We are isolated here and cannot buy cigarettes or candy, and they are almost necessary to our existence. We can hear the shelling at the front very plainly and airplanes are as common as birds. The noise of their engines can be heard almost constantly, but we seldom look up now."

'Red Cross Week' Drive for $100,000,000 Set by the President to Open May 20

WASHINGTON, May 8 (By A. P.).

PRESIDENT WILSON last night issued a proclamation designating the week beginning May 20 at "Red Cros sweek" and calling upon the American people to contribute generously to the second $100,000,000 war fund of the American Red Cross for the alleviation of suffering among the American troops in France and their dependents at home and among the fighting forces and civilian populations of the allied countries. The proclamation follows:

Inasmuch as the war fund of 1917, so generously contributed by the American people to the American Red Cross for the administration of relief at home and abroad, has been practically exhausted by appropriation for the welfare of the men in our military and naval forces and for those dependent upon them, and for the yet more urgent necessities of our allies, military and civilian, who have long borne the brunt of war;

And, inasmuch as the American Red Cross has been recognized by law and international convention as the public instrumentality for war relief;

And, inasmuch as the year of our own participation in the war has brought unprecedented demands upon the patriotism and liberality of our people, and made evident the necessity of concentrating the work of relief in one main organization which can respond effectively and universally to the needs of humanity under stress of war;

And, inasmuch as the duration of the war and the closer and closer co-operation of the American Red Cross with our own army and navy, with the Governments of our allies, and with foreign relief organizations have resulted in the discovery of new opportunity of helpfulness under conditions which translate opportunity into duty;

And, inasmuch as the American Red Cross War Council and its commissioners in Europe have faithfully and economically administered the people's trust;

Now, therefore, by virtue of my authority as President of the United States and president of the American Red Cross, I, Woodrow Wilson, do hereby proclaim the week beginning May 20, 1918, as "Red Cross week," during which the people of the United States will be called upon again to give generously to the continuation of the important work of relieving distress, restoring the waste of war, and assisting in maintaining the morale of our own troops and the troops and peoples of our allies, by this manifesting effort and sacrifice on the part of those who, though not privileged to bear arms, are of one spirit, purpose and determination with our warriors.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done in the District of Columbia this 4th day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and eighteen, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty-second.

By the President,
WOODROW WILSON.
ROBERT LANSING,
Secretary of State.

FORMER BELLEVILLE BANKER IS PAROLED

Henry J. Fink Has Served 4½ Years of Embezzlement Term.

The Illinois Pardon Board yesterday granted a parole to Henry J. Fink of Belleville, from Chester penitentiary, where he was sent in October, 1913, for an indeterminate sentence of one to 10 years, on his plea of guilty to embezzlement. Fink appropriated funds aggregating between $250,000 and $300,000 intrusted to him by clients, to most of whom he gave no security except his personal notes.

For years Fink, as a private banker and investment broker, enjoyed the unbounded confidence of the people of Belleville. Many widows and others turned over to him all their savings.

In the latter part of August, 1913, he dropped from sight for a week and when his creditors, becoming apprehensive, made inquiries, it was admitted by his attorney that he had suffered heavy losses. He was found by a Post-Dispatch reporter at the home of a relative in St. Louis and said that he had left Belleville to avoid a nervous breakdown and would remain away until his affairs were straightened out.

But it was found that his affairs could not be straightened out. A warrant was issued and he returned to Belleville, submitted to arrest and gave bond. His indictment on six counts followed. He entered a plea of guilty to one of the counts and received the indeterminate sentence.

Among the disclosures that surprised Belleville residents was that Fink had been known as a spender in the night life of St. Louis and that he was attentive to a young woman, a stenographer, formerly of Freeburg, Ill., and was planning to marry her.

The secretary of the Pardon Board said today that numerous requests had been made for a parole for Fink and that, as he had served more than three-fourths of the maximum sentence, minus time for good behavior, it was decided that he had suffered sufficiently for the crime that he had committed.

ALBERT MERRILL GETS 2 YEARS FOR DEATH OF T. J. BURKE

Man Charged With Murder Permitted to Plead Guilty to Fourth Degree Manslaughter.

Albert Merrill, a bartender at 1627 North Leffingwell avenue, who was charged with murder in the first degree, was permitted to plead guilty today to manslaughter in the fourth degree, upon recommendation of Circuit Attorney McDaniel to Judge Falkenhainer, and was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

Thomas J. Burke, 32 years old, 2910 Madison street, was found dead in his chair in the saloon of Thomas J. Egan at 2745 Cass avenue on Nov. 27 last. Merrill was bartender in the saloon. He declared that Burke had come into the saloon and complained of being ill. The Coroner obtained a statement from James McGee, negro porter in the saloon, that Merrill had shot Burke, after a quarrel between Merrill and a third man.

The reason for the recommendation of a lesser charge than murder against Merrill was the fact that the negro was an ex-convict, another witness to the shooting has disappeared and that Merrill acted in a measure in self-defense.

WOMEN IN RIFLE SQUAD BEGIN TARGET PRACTICE

None Nervous in Handling Firearms; one Scores 22 Out of 25 Shots.

One hundred twenty St. Louis women, members of the Woman's Rifle Squad of St. Louis, an organization formed recently to train women in the use of firearms as a means of protecting themselves and their homes, have begun target practice at the revolver and rifle range in the Armory, Grand avenue and Market street.

Under the direction of Maj. C. C. Crossman of the Missouri Home Guards, an expert marksman, 25 of the women yesterday were instructed for the first time in handling a rifle. Armed with 22-caliber rifles, the beginners made unusually good scores, one scoring 22 out of 25 shots.

Yesterday's class was the second held since the organization was formed and, according to Maj. Crossman, none of the women exhibited the slighetst nervousness in handling the rifles, the first firearm to be studied.

"The only difficulty experienced by the instructors," Maj. Crossman said, "is in getting the women to give more attention to the shooting than to gossip. Although everyone of them displays unusual enthusiasm and gives the instructor the best of attention, there is a tendency to group together and talk, which materially lengthens the proceedings.

Each member of the organization pays an initiation fee of $1, and $15 for a rifle, their only equipment at present. Not all of them have obtained their rifles, and until they do so will have to divide five rifles, the only ones available, among them.

The originator of the association was Mrs. Bell Smith Estey of 3864 Shaw avenue, formerly chairman of the Twenty-sixth Ward Chapter of the Women's Council of National Defense. Aided by Mrs. Albert Ellicock of 5221 Page boulevard, she began recruiting the membership last fall, and by means of the telephone succeeded in interesting more than 100 women.

The members are divided into six classes of approximately 20 each, who will hold target practice on Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday afternoons at the armory. When their preliminary training is completed they will probably be taken to the range of a St. Louis rifle club at Clayton for outdoor target practice. By this time the members hope to have uniforms.

Officers of the organization are: Mrs. Philip B. Fouke, chairman; Mrs. Harry Langenberg, vice chairman; Mrs. C. C. Crossman, executive officer; Mrs. Albert Ellicock, secretary, and Mrs. A. Moll, trasurer. Officers of the various classes, to rank as captains, will be elected later by the classes.

A number of competent instructors have volunteered to help the women, among them Maj. Crossman's wife, who is an expert shot with rifle or revolver.

"JUDAREAL" FILM NOT INDORSED BY ZIONISTS

Is Private Enterprise, Official of Organization Says—Does Not Discredit Production.

In a communication to the Post-Dispatch, A. H. Fromenson of New York, director of the publicity department of the Zionists organizations of America, asks this paper to point out that the forthcoming film release entitled "Judarael" is a private moving picture enterprise and that it is not given under the auspices or with the indorsement of the Zionist organizations of America or the Federation of American Zionists.

Fromenson says that numerous newspaper advertisements have been carried throughout the United States that this film was to be shown under the auspices of the "Federation of American Zionist Societies" for the benefit of the Palestine Restoration Fund. His explanation, he says, is not made with the intention of discrediting the performance, but to acquaint the public that the Zionist organizations of America are aligned with no moving picture enterprises.

The Missouri Malleable Iron Co. Buildings Are Roofed With Certain-teed

Architects, builders and the public generally have put Certain-teed in class A-1 as a "permanent" type of roof, and have specified it for practically every important structure that has gone up recently in the St. Louis district.

For industrial buildings, the advantages of Certain-teed are especially important

Under the corrosive action of smoke, fumes, sparks, acids and heat, the life of the ordinary type roof is greatly shortened. But these elements have no effect on a Certain-teed Roof. Certain-teed, also, does not melt or run, and cannot clog gutters or downspouts—no gravel is used. The larger the roof area and the more exposed it is to disintegrating elements, the surer is Certain-teed to prove its economy and long service.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone

BEAUTY CULTURE.

DOLORES.—It is said that the water in which potatoes have been boiled with the skins on forms a speedy and harmless dye for hair and eyebrows. Potato parings before cooking may be boiled by themselves and the water strained off for use. To apply it, shoulders should be covered with cloths to protect dress, and a fine comb dipped in the water, drawn through the hair at each stroke till the head is thoroughly soaked. Let hair dry thoroughly before putting it up. If result is not satisfactory the first time, repeat the wetting with a sponge, taking care not to discolor the skin of the part in the scalp, the brow and the neck. Exposing the hair to the sun out of doors will darken this dye.

HEALTH HINTS.

V. O. H.—The disease you mention is a too serious trouble and too far-reaching in its effects for you to try to treat it yourself. The formula you suggest is worthless.

LAW POINTS.

E. B.—Swiss may learn anything about naturalization, free of charge, by seeing Mr. Bevington, Room 210 Custom House.

REBA R.—Advise you get an attorney who will look to your interest and not that of priest whom he seems to favor; the unjust claims it seems they want to pull through; and they won't succeed.

MRS. M. D.—If husband is in the army the War Department can find him. Write all facts to the department.

CLYCOPS.—Red Cross will cheerfully tell you all about insurance and allotments. (1633 Railway Exchange.)

DAILY READER.—Your wife, if she can show dependency, will get the Government allowance, which is $15 a month, and your allotment of $15 a month.

WORRIED.—The only way the Government may force a registrant to undergo an operation, is when the operation is a minor one—one not requiring the administration of an anaesthetic.

MARTIN.—If a man is employed by the Emergency Fleet Corporation and a claim for his services are supported by the man in charge of the yard, he will not be given a deferred classification, but will be in a class known as the Emergency Fleet Corporation, and will not be called to service of the army as long as he retains a position with them.

WORRIED WIFE.—They would both be guilty of perjury. Could hardly state exact punishment. If you know of a case of this sort, notify the local board at which this man registered and also the Department of Justice in the Federal Building at 8th and Olive.

MOTHER.—If you will go to 1633 Railway Exchange Bldg., the Red Cross will tell you about allotments. It advises families of soldiers and sailors on any and all important matters of business that may arise during the absence in the service of husband, father or brother, so that the standard of the family may be kept up while the natural protector is absent. It advises as to the best course to pursue when serious illness threatens, or financial or other form of trouble is imminent.

W. J. F.—Ever since Decoration Day (Memorial) was a public holiday in Missouri, on May 30, it has been observed by the St. Louis public schools. The difference between Memorial day and Decoration day was thus defined by Hon. B. M. Blackburn in the Atlanta Journal. Memorial day, he explained, was of Southern origin, and was adopted two years before Decoration day was adopted in the North. The manner in which the idea originated Mr. Blackburn related as follows: "A number of ladies representing the Soldiers' Aid Society of Columbus, Ga., visited on March 12, 1866, Linwood Cemetery, to give a Spring dressing to the graves of Confederate soldiers. While attending this duty they observed the little daughter of Mrs. Williams gathering wild flowers and placing them on the graves of the unknown Confederate dead. Thus the immortal suggestion of organized remembrance was given to these loyal Southern women by the inborn patriotism of a little child; Memorial day had its origin in the impulse that gave birth to the Confederate cause—innocent devotion to the Southern home. On returning to their homes these true Southern women decided that day to organize the first Memorial Association that was instituted in the South, and with a view to making it general, Mrs. Mary Ann Howard Williams gave her name and the names of her associates to glory by addressing a letter to the Columbus Times, which will ever remain a part of the imperishable service."

Make It a Three-Time Order

One insertion of a want ad will do the work more often than the first call over the telephone will find your party in. In both want advertising and telephoning, the second "try" is often necessary; and, in some cases, several efforts may have to be made. In such instances, the persistent person wins—the unpersistent one concludes that both want advertising and telephoning are failures, when the fault is in the fellow himself—in giving up.

Try a 3-time ad.

Lower rates for three or more insertions.

Phone your want to the Post-Dispatch. Call Double Six, Double O—Olive or Central—or leave the want ad with your nearest druggist.

Why Should Landlords and Agents Be Without Tenants

They should NOT, because a sure and steady income from realty is assured landlords and agents who use the Post-Dispatch "WANT" columns SUFFICIENTLY.

If you have residential holdings, apartments, flats, houses or business locations, retail or wholesale, or warehouses or lofts, they all may be available for dependable tenants if you use the "wants" SUFFICIENTLY.

The same means—the use of these "Wants" —is effectual in the renting of rooms in private homes and rooming houses.

City Items in Brief

The next regular meeting of the North St. Louis Business Men's Association will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at Northwestern Hall, Elliot and St. Louis avenues.

A warrant was issued yesterday against Gus A. Weis, 28 years old, 3012 Indiana avenue, charging him with feloniously wounding Sergt. Uriah W. Mackay, a motor cycle policeman, at Grand and Chouteau avenues, Saturday night. It is alleged that he violated the traffic law by driving north on the west side of a Grand car that had stopped at Chouteau avenue. His automobile collided with Mackay's motorcycle. Mackay was thrown off and severely injured.

The regular meeting of the Non-commissioned Officers' Association of the First Regiment, Home Guards will be held Saturday night at the Armory, 220 South Grand avenue.

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Twelfth Engineers will meet tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. at the Engineers' Club, 3817 Olive street. Charles D. Cooper, executive secretary of the War Camp Community Service Board, will speak.

The Church of the Ascension, Cates and Goodfellow avenues, of which the Rev. John S. Bunting is pastor, held its annual dinner and business meeting Monday night. New members elected to the vestry are Dr. Arthur Kimball, Edward Mead, H. S. Snow and George Peckham. Members of the Vestry re-elected are James Bull, W. C. Stith, Ben Williams, Walter Woodward, Louis Woodward, Benjamin A. Wood, Oliver Abel, A. S. Pidding and W. H. Grocott.

Booths are being opened in department stores, banks, office buildings and hotels from which appeals are being made for subscriptions in the "Help the Babies" campaign of the Mothers and Babies' Home. More than 7000 homeless mothers and babies have been cared for at the home in the 19 years of its existence.

Walter Dennis, 5601 Washington court, principal assistant engineer of the Wabash Railroad, has been commissioned Major in the United States army, construction department of the quartermaster's corps. He departed for Washington Monday night.

An inventory of the estate of Frederick E. Reis, who lived at 5144 Von Versen avenue, shows personal property worth $22,265. He was manager of the Wagner & Reis Commission Co.

Ben Hoefflinger, an expressman of 4042 Missouri avenue, told the police that when he went to 4215 Oregon avenue yesterday afternoon in response to an order to call for trunks he was met in the front yard by a man who advised him not to enter as there was a "bad dog" on the grounds. The man told Hoefflinger to give him change for a $10 bill and said that he would get the trunks. Hoefflinger gave him $5 and the man went through the side yard and disappeared. Hoefflinger then discovered that he had responded to a fake call.

Railroad watchmen fired several shots yesterday afternoon at two negroes whom they caught stealing brass journals from freight cars beneath the Chouteau avenue viaduct. The negroes escaped.

Six automobiles reported stolen yesterday afternoon and evening belonged to Joseph I. McIntyre, 5244 Washington boulevard; Frank Loggeman, Madison, Ill.; Harry J. Goessling, 927 Maryville avenue; J. Kirchoff, 1801 Sidney street; Stewart McDonald, Main and Cornelia streets, and G. E. Williams, 3915 Botanical avenue.

Junk thieves looted the old Trinity M. E. Church, Tenth and North Market streets, across the street from the North Market Street Police Station, yesterday afternoon and chopped about 100 pounds of zinc from the pipe organ. The congregation abandoned the edifice some time ago and now has its place of worship at Thirteenth and Tyler streets.

At the request of Capt. G. Polhemus Forty-sixth Infantry, Camp Gordon, the police here have wired him verification of the death of Edward Madden, 5134 Easton avenue, on Mronday from tuberculosis.

A Woman's Auxiliary of the St. Louis Committee of the Fort Sheridan Association was formed yesterday afternoon at the Statler Hotel by more than 300 mothers, wives and sisters of officers graduated from the Fort Sheridan and Fort Riley training camps. The organization was effected following a speech by Capt. Myron E. Adams of Chicago, who was director of morale at the Fort Sheridan camps.

Mrs. Elinda Engel, 20 years old, of 4320 Juniata street, was removed from her home to the city hospital yesterday in a serious condition from swallowing bichloride of mercury Sunday night. She told the police she had taken the poison by mistake.

Lillian Murray, 22 years old, of 2001 Angelrodt street, a housemaid employed at 3605 North Broadway, fell 15 feet from a porch in the rear of the second floor at that address yesterday afternoon, fracturing her skull.

A baby, about 10 days old, was abandoned in the waiting room of Union Station this morning. It was taken to the city hospital.

Chin Ng Ten, a Chinese laundryman at 4606 Page boulevard, yesterday filed suit to divorce his wife, Rose, a Mexican, alleging that she deserted him in St. Louis in December, 1913. They were married in March, 1906, at Algiers, La. The plaintiff was born in this country. His father made a fortune on the Pacific Coast and returned to China.

Unusually large supplies of potatoes will be brought to the Wild Hunter Market, Broadway and Jefferson avenue, by farmers tomorrow and Saturday in keeping with the purpose of "potato-ful week." The Tenth Ward Improvement Association, under whose auspices the market is conducted, has obtained promises from the farmers that the price will not be increased because of the demand, and has placarded the market with the slogan, "Eat another potato."

Calvin C. Allen of 6146 Waterman avenue offered a reward of $50 today for the arrest and conviction of vandals who did 300 damage to his automobile after stealing it Sunday from in front of the Third Baptist Church, while Allen and his family were attending services. The machine was found in a ditch at Black Jack, St. Louis County, at 1:30 a. m., Monday.

The funeral of Joseph L. Harriss, 29 years old, a traveling salesman in Southern Illinois for the St. Louis branch of Armour & Co., was held in Carbondale, Ill., today. He died of pneumonia after a week's illness, leaving a wife and one child.

The regular monthly meeting of the Concordia Protective Association will be held tonight at Concordia Turner Hall, 1301 Arsenal street.

In accordance with a resolution adopted at the Musical Mass Meeting last Sunday afternoon, Charles E. Hatfield, chairman, has appointed the following committee to work out details of organization: John Gundlach, former president of the Pegeant Choral Society; William John Hall, former dean of the Missouri Chapter of the American Guild of Organists; Ernest R. Kroeger, pianist and composer; Frank Gecks, president of the Musicians' Mutual Benefit Association, and George Enzinger, president of the Associated Musicians of St. Louis.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

FRECKLES

Now Is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots.

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine—double strength—from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles. — ADVERTISEMENT.

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent, never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

A Memorial Day Suggestion.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As an old Soldier's daughter I would ask space for the following:

Is business so good on the morning of May 30, that the stores and business houses must remain open? In the 52 weeks of the year we have five full holidays and half day on May 30. New Year's day we celebrate a full day and turn over a new leaf. July 4 we celebrate our Independence which is proper. Labor day was made possible by union organization. Thanksgiving means a big dinner and a good time to most of us, Christmas has come to mean a big dinner and exchanging of presents (to most of us I fear), instead of the birth of the Prince of Peace. But on May 30 we have a half day in which to put a few flowers on the graves of those that have made business possible. The employer can leave the business in care of his employes and go to the memorial ceremonies and to the cemetery and put flowers on the graves of his loved ones, but the majority of those who have done so much for our Flag are relatives of the employes who must be on duty till noon. After they get through work and have dinner it is too late to do anything but have a good time as the ceremonies are about all over and everyone that could do so, has been to the cemetery and placed flowers.

In 53 years our boys "over there" will be like our boys of '61, are over here today. Each year the soldiers of '61 and the Spanish-American veterans are getting fewer and do we want our boys who must go "over there" to feel that we give a stingy half day to their memory?

A whole day once a year to the memory of those who have done so much is small enough surely, and is it not possible that being unable to attend the ceremonies of the day that Memorial day loses its significance to a great many of the younger generation?

OLD SOLDIER'S DAUGHTER.

Get Acquainted and Agree.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Our situation is paradoxical. Our slogan is "Make the World Safe for Democracy." Does this mean that America is included? I raise this question in view of the varied feeling on the Prager lynching and the utterance of Father Walsh of St. Ann's Church. The colored people throughout the land are loyally responding to each call of the nation, as well as we who are more conveniently placed. I feel that this is no time to engender in any way ill feeling between the races. The lot of our colored citizens is hard enough without our trying to make it harder. If we are to help to make the world safe for democracy, I say, "America First."

Let us initiate a movement to promote a broad fellowship between the races. Let us become as well acquainted with them as they are with us. Let us share more of their ideas. Because our papers reach them, they know us well; and because their papers seldom reach us, we know them not. Since they, like us, are human and are, like us, devoted to liberty, righteousness and justice, let us not continue apart, but let us try to get together.

LEE SMITH.

A Reminder to the Naturalized.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I enclose herewith copy "Oath of Allegiance," which every person must take to become a citizen of the United States. Recently a client of mine asked me to secure a copy of this for the purpose of posting it in a conspicuous place in the company's plant. He said this was for the purpose of reminding naturalized employes of the oath that they had taken when they became citizens of this country. I was impressed with his suggestion and it seems to me that were the oath of allegiance printed in a conspicuous place in our newspapers daily, it would do much to refresh the memory of those who have taken the obligation.

M. C. EARLY.

OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

I hereby declare on oath, that I absolutely and entirely renounce and abjure all allegiance and fidelity to any foreign prince, potentate, state, or sovereignty, and particularly to Germany, of which I have heretofore been a subject, and that I will support and defend the Constitution and Laws of the United States of America against all enemies, foreign and domestic, and I will bear true faith and allegiance to the same.

A Senator's Mission.

From the Chicago News.

Senator "Jim" Reed is not greatly interested in the war. He has consecrated his life to getting Hoover.

THE LUSITANIA POLICY REMAINS.

Today the news of another Lusitania massacre, the anniversary of which was observed yesterday, would astonish nobody. It would be taken as a matter of course. There would be astonishment only if the German Government stayed its hand and refused to take advantage of the opportunity to slay the weak and defenseless if any immediate military advantage could possibly result.

What seemed unbelievable three years ago is now so wholly in accord with the manner in which Germany makes war that it is accepted as one of the commonplace activities of frightfulness in action. That is the status to which Prussianism and autocracy have brought a nation which four years ago ranked as first in many of its standards of civilization. Even the lies that the German Government employed to justify the slaughter of the Lusitania victims are now recognized as characteristic of the Imperial Government and of Berlin diplomacy.

In all history there is no other such instance of the crucifixion of the soul of a nation by its Government as this junker autocracy has wrought with Germany. The amazing thing is that the German people themselves have given no evidence as yet of their ability to understand what has happened, or to realize that no military victory, whatever its consequences, would leave them anything but pariahs until they had made atonement for the crimes that their Government has committed in their name until they had destroyed the infamous political system out of which this iniquity came.

The countries that have been crushed and devastated can all be rehabilitated. The material damage can be obliterated, and the blood that has been spilled in defense of liberty will remain forever a red badge of honor; but for Germany there can be no rehabilitation until the German people themselves have come to share with the rest of the world its horror and detestation of the institution which is responsible for the more wanton and terrible crime that civilization has witnessed.

Senator King explained to the Senate that his criticism of the Post-Dispatch on account of the Weinsburg interview was due to an impression that Dr. Weinsburg was editor of the Post-Dispatch. The Senator's explanation is worse than his offense.

TERRIFIC PACE FOR U-BOATS.

All limitations as to cost and all other conditions governing the production of vessel tonnage for commercial uses must have been disregarded in building the 5548-ton collier Tuckahoe, launched 27 days after her keel was laid at Camden, N. J. Stanch as she undoubtedly is, to comply with the standards that have to be met before life is hazarded on board her at sea, she may not be as durable as ships produced under less urgent circumstances.

But whatever the initial expense incurred in her creation and whatever costly shortcomings she may develop later, she is worth all she cost. The country, impatient for results in the ship-building program, entered on nearly a year ago, needed just this object lesson on the possibilities of American industry in responding to desperate emergencies. A record of a little more than 50 days between keel-laying and launching has been regarded as marvelous heretofore in providing tonnage for the deficiencies caused by U-boats. But this ship will be equipped with her engines and made ready for sea in 52 days, about the time for constructive work on the ways alone in the case of other rush work on ships built under war pressure.

An impossible pace is being set for the submarines. Completed ships of 80,180 tons were delivered last week and in addition ships of 79,175 tons were launched.

AN "UNCONSTITUTIONAL" BUSHEL.

The city ordinance, which attempted to make a bushel of 2493.56 cubic inches, as compared with the Federal bushel of 2150.5 cubic inches and the State bushel of 2150.4 cubic inches, having been declared unconstitutional, the legal bushel is once more a definite quantity, the difference of a tenth of a cubic inch between the Federal and State measures being ignorable.

If the long bushel is unconstitutional, the short bushel, which is really only an honest bushel when heaped, is illegal and can, under the law, be prohibited. It will answer the same purpose, if, instead of smashing these illegal measure, their use is forbidden by the Inspector of Weights and Measures.

The excuse that buyers knew what they were getting, when buying produce put up in the short bushel measure, is invalid. Weights and measures ought to be what they purport to be and what the law provides they shall be. This is the only just and reasonable rule of trade. It should be compulsory on every trader.

DOG POUND GAMBLING.

That St. Louis policeman who lost his job for shooting craps at the dog pound makes rather a pathetic figure. There is no sophistry, of course, which can stretch far enough to bring discredit upon the Police Board for firing him, but surely nobody will object to an extension of at least a measure of human sympathy in his direction.

Crap-shooting is a bad, immoral game. It is one of the rapidest methods yet devised for separating an individual from his small change. It is not even affected by the aristocrats of the gambling fraternity. It is so hopelessly prebeian. A jitney grub stake, as long as it lasts, entitles one to as much honor in its earlier stages as a plethoric roll does to the casual sitter-in at a session of stud or jackpots. While its sporting chances are said by those who know to be about the same as those of roulette, there is a fascinating glamor about the very term, "rouge et noir," that is wholly wanting in "seven and eleven."

The defense of the patrolman in the case in point was that he had strolled into the dog pound looking for "evidence"; that it was simply his bad luck that his Sergeant happened along just as he had faded somebody for four bits. Accepting his version at its face value, he is simply the victim of circumstances. The sight of a policeman's uniform is usually such an effective prophylaxis against craps shooting that it must be inferred there is something wrong when a copper is not only allowed to draw near, but is even permitted to hazard his money. One feels that the gang must know and approve him. Therefore the case against this man lay more in presumption than in anything else and one feels sorry for anybody who loses his job through presumption.

It is to be hoped that his pathetic example will be remembered by his brother policemen. It is very wrong for an officer of the law to gamble. But if one must gamble, it is best to frequent the bucket shop, the stock ticker or the quiet game in one's most private and exclusive club.

JAMES A. REARDON.

In the death of James A. Reardon St. Louis lost one of its best men. Mr. Reardon's rise from porter to president of a manufacturing company is only an incident in the record of a life filled with good deeds. He did not let business interfere with generous impulse and useful service in all human relationships. He loved children; he loved good books; he was faithful and efficient in all his obligations; he was deeply interested in the welfare of the community and of all those with whom he came in contact.

Mr. Reardon's big heart, and particularly his love for children, was manifested by his enthusiastic labors for the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival. He was one of the first men to respond to the appeal of the Festival in behalf of the poor children. He served on the Executive Committee from the beginning and for 17 years handled the arduous task of purchasing and distributing thousands of gifts. He gladly gave all of his holiday time and a great draft of energy to the happiness of the poor children. His sympathetic joy in contributing to the joys of the little ones, who otherwise would be deprived of Christmas cheer, was a liberal education in benevolence. Many thousands outside of the circle of his family and friends will sadly miss his gentle personality and ministering good will.

THE LARCENY OF A NAVAL FLEET.

German manufacture of substitutes that closely approximate the real thing reached its highest success in the made-in-Germany peace, a substitute for war, of which Russia became the beneficiary and which was so little differentiated from war that Russia's great Black Sea fleet, including 10 battleships and dozens of smaller vessels, was seized with the capture of Sebastopol. It is said that "a part" of the fleet will be returned to Ukraine. That is the same thing as saying that Germany will return a part to Germany itself, as Ukraine is under the blight of German control.

What will be done with the other "part," presumably the stronger part? The vessels are within only a short sail of the Mediterranean. Will Berlin, which pursues a very cautious policy with its own naval vessels, be more prodigal in exposing Russia's naval property to the risks of allied encounters? If it fails to send them out to fight, it will not be due to any consideration for Russian rights. Though the German North Sea fleet remains hidden in harbors, a great allied naval force is continually occupied in guarding the waters from a possible venturing forth. Possibly a diversion of the allies' strength to the Mediterranean for like reasons is aimed at.

The Brest Litovsk treaty obligated each contracting party to cultivate friendly relations with the other. The larceny of the fleet is the final exhibit to the Bolsheviki on how Germany is fulfilling this obligation. The specific clause providing for the disposition of the fleet by internment is respected no more than terms set forth less definitely.

POTATOES AND THINGS.

Eat another potato, says the busy Hooverite, a yellow one from Georgia, or a Burbank flaky white; we gardeners all are happy when we hear this cheering word, and our fine backyard ambition is immeasurably spurred. For we'll dig so much the harder and we'll plant so much the more, since we see still other movements like "potato week" in store.

Eat another radish will be music to our ears when the crop that we are tending in full panoply appears; for we'll raise them rare and luscious of a kind you can't resist and when you start to eat them you will never more desist, such hunger-teasing radishes which, whether white or red, you'll eat from early morning till its time to go to bed.

Eat another turnip will be a slogan, too, all purple-rimmed and tender and glistening with the dew; we've planted them and hoed them and we're watching for the weeds and when they're picked and harvested they'll meet their country's needs. In fact we're raising lots of things to ripen in the sun; just eat another one of each and the war's as good as won.

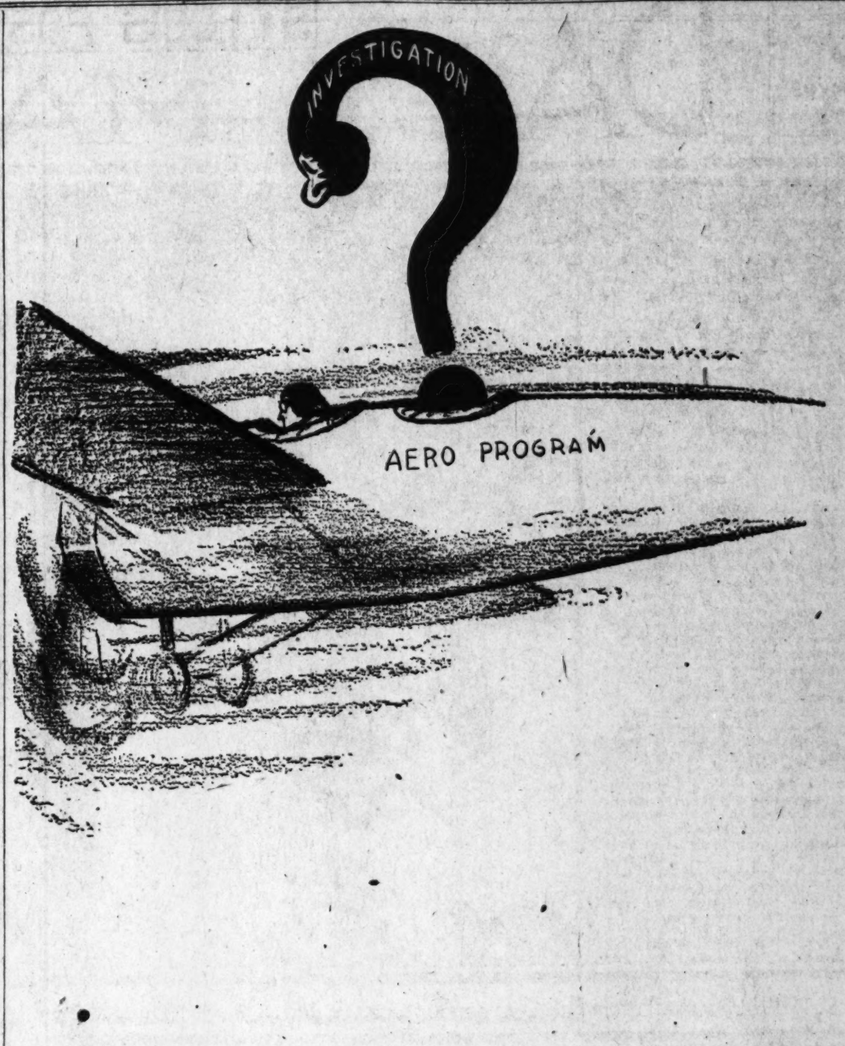

DOWN WITH HIGH HEELS.

If high heels are not brought low in Illinois next year it will not be the fault of James H. Kirby of Petersburg. Kirby is convinced that what ails this country is the high heel that is worn by the women of the nation and that we never will amount to much until we get down from it.

Mr. Kirby represented the Petersburg district in the last Illinois Legislature and was the proud parent of a bill to cut two inches from all the high heels in the State. When the legislators, influenced thereunto by their women folks, as Mr. Kirby believe and asserts, were through jumping on it the anti-high-heel bill turned up its toes and died.

Mr. Kirby announces that he will be a candidate for re-election on the Democratic ticket and the anti-high-heel platform, and pledges himself, if re-elected, to introduce another bill and do his best to get it through. He thinks he will have a better chance next time because he is backed up by a letter written by a famous physician who assures the Petersburg man that the high heel is the most important question before the American people today. When he gets up in the House and reads that letter he thinks opposition will hide its head.

Mr. Kirby confesses, though, that he has not been able to win his daughter's approval. But she seems to have the best of the argument. He has always told her that no intellectual achievement was possible to the young woman who wears high heels. But last week his daughter won an oratorical and declamatory contest at Quincy. And she wore three-and-a-half inch heels.

SOUTH—JUNE.

Up the hill,
Into the sky,
Plum blossoms nod as I pass you by!
Over the hill,
Into the lane,
Wee flower spill out your cup full of rain!'

Sing to the sun
A golden rhyme,
Sweet is the air in mimosa time;
Sing to the day
A rhyme of blue,
Shell of sky is the same bright hue!

Oh the heart of me, it is in tune,
With the heart of the South—in June!

GRAEME BURR.

The former custom of having one's hair bobbed is evidently coming in again. At any rate a barber near Taylor and St. Louis avenues has this sign out:

Come in and have your hair boobed.

A clothier at Dallas, Tex., displays this sign:

Extra pair of pants for a few days only.

Our sign hunter wonders if one is supposed to return them at the end of that time. We make nothing of it serving as an assurance.

The following is from a tailor's window, Olive street:

Mt. Toilor.

Our sign hunter went in to inquire and learned that this stands for merchant tailor in the sector Olive-Fourth-Third. He says he came out feeling like a tailor's goose.

Can Mrs. Wilson's Indian origin have anything to do with the President's manner of signifying his approval of documents? B.

The son of a rich father decided that he ought to enlist, and went to the recruiting station. He was asked his occupation. "Why-er-well, just running through the guv'nor's money, don't you know," was the reply. The officer seemed in doubt how to classify him when a Corporal standing near came to his assistance with a brilliant suggestion. "Put him down as a brass finisher, sir," he said.—Boston Transcript.

RECOGNITION.

A BLUR of faces danced,
One strangely stood apart,
To stamp itself at once,
On my awakened heart.

'Twas not that love so came—
Long past that gift divine;
'Twas that I glimpsed a soul
Which was akin to mine.

—WILLIE AURELIA HUDSON.

A St. Louisan who has just returned from the vicinity of an army camp in the Southwest tells this story: The colored officers are immensely proud of their rank, and they are one of the sights about any cantonment where there are black troops. One day one of these fancy gentlemen, a Captain, drilling his men, occasionally slanting his gaze to the decorations on his sleeves, and otherwise mighty well content with his lot, cried out:

"Eyes right!"

The assembled host merely rolled its eyes over in the languorous manner of the race. The officer protested.

"You sayed eyes right, didn' yuh?" the Sergeant demurred.

"Yep. I sayed eyes right."

"Didn' we do it?"

"You done it," the Captain admitted; "but when I say eyes right, eyes left, I means roll your eyes over so I can hear 'em snap in their sockets!"

Does not Korniloff, in the multiplicity of his deaths, remind one of our own dear Villa? B.

ANOTHER SAN JUAN.

SAN JUAN HILL still bears your bullets
In its steep and rugged breast
Where you charged old Toral's legions
Hiding there upon its crest.
There are scars, in Spain, still livid
Where your saber left its brand,
When the Maine destroyers beat it
Back to "hot tamale" land.

White men fought at Santiago;
Black men, too, fought at their side.
White and black men, both for honor,
Charged that fire-swept hill, and died.
Black man, we have not forgotten
How you faced the issue then;
Will you do the same in Flanders
When you're called to "charge" again?

There's another San Juan yonder
Which the white man strives to gain,
Facing not the ragged armies
Nor the makeshift guns of Spain;
But the well-armed Teuton millions,
Urged by conquest, greed and lust,
World dominion, rape and murder—
We must throttle them or bust.

Wake your race! The white man needs you.
Hear again that stirring plea.
"Massa Abe" is calling, black man,
As he did in sixty-three.
Pickaninnies in the cotton,
Deck-hands on the "Lady Lou,"
Old black mammy—half forgotten—
Whisper from the past to you.

White men, black men, red and yellow,
Copper-hued from Hindustan;
Brown men, too, are coming, maybe,
From the Island of Japan.
Hear the world emancipation—
Can't you feel it grip and thrill?
Hit this foe another wallop,
Like the one at San Juan Hill!

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

Apologizing to Daniels.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel.

THE late Admiral Dewey said of Daniels that he was one of the secretaries of the navy the country had. We are not sure but he said best Secretary.

No doubt the old Admiral was not much impressed by the excellent condi and marked progress of the navy Mr. Daniels' secretaryship, but was favorably impressed with Mr. Daniels cellent and, under the circumsta somewhat unusual horse sense in for ing his official decisions on naval ques with the expert judgment of naval m

No doubt he was accustomed to with due respect to the opinions of miral Dewey himself—which was a wise and tactful.

Mr. Daniels—unlike some more opi ated and less sensible officials, electe well as appointive—was not under any gular delusion that the bare fact of made Secretary of the Navy, or Secre of War of itself endowed the incumb with the technical and professional knowledge which such men as Dewey, Pershing, had spent laborious lives in quiring.

He had some excellent and progres general ideas about the navy as a and public institution. He also had undeniable idea that for a civilian Secretary who could no more navigate ship than a cow could manage an airp the right, patriotic and, in fact, hon thing to do in purely naval questions to ascertain the best naval opinion defer to it.

That is primarily why, when an congressional committee made an inve gation into the condition of the navy, found it up to the mark in every particular—not exceeding some particulars which the army equipment had been fou very deficient.

Anybody who has ever scouted Mr. Daniels as a suitable man for this job owes Mr. Daniels an apology. Herewith one.

Seniority and Fitness.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

AGE and long service may bring experience, but they by no means constitute a guarantee of wisdom or These somewhat obvious truths are suggested by a current discussion in newspaper circles over the succes Senator Stone in the chairmanship of Committee on Foreign Relations. It agitation based solely upon the fear the congressional practice of adhering the rule of seniority in the filling of cies at the head of the standing com tees may result in the promotion person totally unfit for the responsibil of that high position. Wholly apart the question whether the fear in this is justified, the discussion should serve bring into relief the leaders in both and House to the importance of breaki custom which has little to commend its age. There are many committee both sides of the Capitol that are so useless that it does not matter in the least who may be chosen to be their men; but as to the others, common and efficiency should dictate the sele of that member best fitted by experi and ability to discharge the respons ties of an important chairmanship.

While Congress is engaged in the haps necessary task of keeping a eye upon the executive, with a view to correction of abuses, the increase of ciency and the exercise of economy it not be just as well for it to make a ginning to clean its own skirts of waste and inefficiency inseparable its committee system? Before it can consistency cast stones at the exec departments of the Government it to set a good example and abolish the ing waste of public money in the pay of mileage and clerk hire to its own bers and, above all, cut out the expe maintaining committees which never and which have no reason for being to enable favored chairmen to pocket salary of a secretary or find jobs for ical handy men.

Hiding the Truth.

From the Springfield Republican.

NOT the least significant part of splendid repulse Monday of great assault on the Meteren-Ellies front was the complete ignoring of it the German official report. From that one could possibly gather that the G mans had been making another desp and costly effort on a wide front to b down the resistance of the allies. Sooner or later the German people will learn it, but the general staff evidently does care to publish its failures. It shows Germany is becoming sensitive over loss of life in this monstrous offensive the western front. From the mo when hope of triumph disappears, the man Government will have to reckon its subjects as well as with the allies.

TODAY'S BEST CARTOON.

"Start some peace talk while I patched up."
—Harding, in The

DOROTHY DIX SAYS:

A Girl Should Marry for Love and Not to Please or Help Her Family.

I HAVE a letter from a girl who says:

"How far have mothers a right to interfere in their daughters' love affairs? I am engaged to a young man who has every good quality except money. He is sober, moral and industrious, but my mother absolutely refuses her consent to our marriage, and says that if I do marry this man that she will never forgive me or have anything to do with me again.

"Do you think that my mother is wrong in her attitude? If I am not afraid of poverty and hard work, why should she be for me? After all, it is I who will have to live with the man I marry, not my mother, and it seems to me that it is more important that I should be pleased in the matter than she."

Of course, the girl is right in this. Husbands and wives are as purely a matter o ftaste as whether you like onions with your beefsteak or not, and those who have to endure a daily diet of them for 30 or 40 years should certainly have the consolation of picking out their own particular flavor.

Each of us has the inalienable right to make our own matrimonial mistake, and if there could be some dispassionate and unprejudiced commission appointed to inquire into when parents are right and when wrong, in opposing their daughter's choice of a husband, a great deal of trouble could be avoided.

Undoubtedly there are times—as in a case when a man is known to be drunken or immoral, or even plain no-account—when a father and mother are just as much bound to try to keep their daughter from marrying the man she is in love with as they would be to prevent her committing suicide if she had a tendency that way. There are hundreds of other cases, however, when the opposition to a young man is merely based on difference of religious views, family pride, or lack of money, that are utterly unjustified.

THE chief source of opposition to most marriages where the course of young love fails to run smooth, is poverty. It is the impecunious suitor who is oftenest persona non grata with his sweetheart's family, for father and mother have the trick of turning a blind eye on the shortcomings of a youth with well-lined pockets, and considering that a man being able to give his wife an automobile and an establishment will cover a multitude of wild oats or bridge over a disparity of 10 years in age.

Of course, one may say that the parental dictum in matters of the heart amounts to little and that in these times no one can keep a girl from marrying the man she wants to or make her marry the one she does not want to marry. Parents can't lock a girl up in a turret chamber nowadays and feed her on bread and water until she is willing to espouse the husband of her choice.

That is true, but there are moral thumbscrews that are just as agonizingly effective as physical ones ever were, and nobody but girls themselves know how often they are applied.

Take, for instance, the case of a girl who belongs to a good family that is poor, a family that has seen "better days" and that writhes under its present estate and that depends upon the daughter to pull it back into prosperity. Such a girl's people have made cruel sacrifices to educate her. She knows all the pinching economies that her every year at school has cost.

She recalls how often her mother's old black dress has been made over in order that she may have fresh new ones. She knows the privations her father endures so she may go into good society and have her chance.

NOBODY puts it into words, but she knows as well as she knows anything, that she is expected to marry rich, and that only by doing so can she repay her family for all the hardships that they have undergone for her sake. She knows that her father and mother have depended on her marriage as their one hope for salvation.

She looks at her mother's tired face, worn with care; she sees her father's bent shoulders, and the younger sisters whose own future will be secured by her making a brilliant match. Sympathy, affection, gratitude, her duty to others, are all urged upon her. She knows that if she goes her own way and marries the poor man of her heart she will be adding another sorrow to burdens that are already crushing, and so, unless she has the moral courage of a hero, and a backbone like a telephone post, she gives in and marries the man her mother wants her to instead of the one she wants to marry herself.

Nor can one always blame the mother over much. She is trying to save her daughter from the life of toil and hardship and anxiety that she has had herself, and that so often makes the middle-aged wife of a poor man utterly disillusioned, and convinced that money is the only factor in matrimony that is worth considering.

But one could better understand a mother's desire for her daughter to marry rich if the rich were invariably happy, or her wish for her daughter to make a brilliant marriage if brilliant marriages always stayed brilliant. But they don't.

RICHES have a way of taking wings to themselves, and we have all seen girls whose nuptials were celebrated with a splendor befitting royalty, returning some heart-broken and miserable to take in sewing to support themselves. Indeed, looking at it as a simple business proposition, and with reference to a girl's future, it is strange that it doesn't oftener occur to parents that the man who has held the same position in a store or office for years in succession and who has saved up a thousand dollars or two, is a better chance than the gilded youth who never did a day's work in his life, or earned a dollar, and whose one star performance consisted in being born a rich man's son.

Parents are justified in trying to save their daughter from grinding poverty, but beyond that they have no right to object to the suitor who can offer a girl an honest heart, a clean bill of health and a willingness to work for her. He may have little else to give her. They may have to begin housekeeping in a three-room cottage or a bankbox flat. They may have many years of toil and struggle, and scrimping before them but they will have love to sweeten it and happiness to gild it.

The most beautiful romance in America, and the one that offsets the hideousness of our divorce courts, is the life story of the middle aged, prosperous couple who have begun poor and worked up together. They have saved together the money for the husband to go into business for himself; they have economized to buy their first home; they have had every plan and hope, and ambition, and triumph together, and they have grown into a oneness that those who have always been rich and prosperous never know.

IT is the very flower of our hard working commercial life, and the girl who marries a rich old man in order to have the pleasure of spending his money, instead of a poor young man in order to have the fun of helping him make his money, makes the mistake of her life.

Besides, fortunes change so rapidly in this country that the difference between marrying a man who has inherited a fortune and marrying a poor hard working man who is making his fortune, is almost a choice between whether you'd rather be rich when you are young or prosperous when you are middle aged.

And before mother sends the poor suitor for her daughter's hand about his business, she should try to solve this question.

Novel Spring Salads

By Mrs. Sarah Moore.

SALAD should form a part of one meal every day. Physicians tell us that we do not serve it half often enough in this country, for green salad is an exceedingly healthful dish and aids materially in keeping the stomach in good condition.

Even elaborate salads are quite easy to make and for the simple salads there is really nothing to do but tc wash the lettuce or other green vegetables carefully, place them in a dish, serve and pass the mayonnaise or French dressing.

BAVARIAN ONION SALAD.—This is a very delicious salad for anyone who is fond of raw onions. Arrange leaves from the white part of the lettuce prettily on a salad dish. Use a bunch of onions, cut each onion in halves and arrange on the lettuce leaves. Now cut one good-sized boiled onion in small pieces and add it to a cupful of mayonnaise dressing. Pour over the salad just before serving.

TOMATO CUP SALAD.—For this salad take as many tomatoes as you have people to serve. With a sharp knife remove a slice from the bottom of each one so that it will stand firmly, and then carefully hollow out the tomato, taking care not to bruise the outer skin. Put the contents of the tomatoes into a bowl with two or three green peppers which have had the seeds removed. Add also one onion and a small head of the white inner leaves of a lettuce. Chop all this quite fine and season with French dressing and with a spoon fill the tomato shells with the mixture. Just before serving put a spoonful of mayonnaise on top of each tomato and serve on lettuce leaves.

SALMON AND RICE SALAD.—Take two cupfuls of cooked rice and half a can of salmon. Mix thoroughly with a folk and season with one-half teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Pour over this a dressing made of one tablespoonful of olive oil, two tablespoonfuls of vinegar and one teaspoonful of mustard, mixed thoroughly. Set the salad on ice until ready to serve, when it should be arranged on a bed of lettuce leaves. This salmon and rice mixture also makes a novel and delicious filling for sandwiches.

VEAL AND GREEN PEA SALAD.—Take half a pound of cold roast veal, cut in tiny dice and add a large cupful of cooked green peas or canned peas. Pour French dressing over this and set in a cool place to chill. When ready to serve place a large spoonful on each lettuce leaf and pour over a little more French dressing.

TOMATO AND EGG SALAD.—Peel and cut the tomatoes into rather thick slices and lay on a bed of lettuce leaves. Surround with sections of hard-boiled egg and dot the dish with olives, pimento or small pieces of pickle. Serve with mayonnaise or French dressing.

THE SANDMAN STORY FOR TONIGHT

BY MRS. F. A. WALKER.

Mr. Dog and His Cousin.

REDDY FOX was taking his noonday nap under the bushes on the side of the hill.

He raised his head and listened as he awoke. He could hear the barking of Mr. Dog at the farm below, and what was far more agreeable to his ear, the quacking of the ducks, for Reddy Fox was hungry.

"If it were not for that wideawake Mr. Dog," said Reddy, "I should have no trouble in getting a good supper or breakfast tonight.' He is most unfriendly to me, and why he should be I do not understand. Mr. Dog and our family must be related. We look very much alike. Of course, he has not such a fine, bushy, handsome tail as our family possesses, but about the head I am bound to admit Mr. Dog's family and mine resemble each other."

Reddy Fox thought for a few minutes and then he jumped up and ran home. "It is only my tail that needs to be disguised," he said, 'and I think I can manage that."

Reddy Fox worked hard all the rest of the day greasing his tail until at night it looked as slick and flat as Mr. Dog's, only it was longer.

Reddy Fox went to a farm down the road and dug up a big bone he had seen a dog hide the day before. Taking it in his mouth, he trotted off for Mr. Dog's as fast as he could go.

Mr. Dog was sleeping with one eye open, for he knew the master's fat ducks were a constant temptation to Reddy Fox.

Reddy crept up behind the house where Mr. Dog lived and poked his head around with the bone in his mouth.

He dropped it right in front of Mr. Dog's nose, which was poked outside the door. "Good evening, Mr. Dog," said Reddy in a very soft voice.

Mr. Dog jumped up growling, but the bone was too much for him. He stopped growling and sniffed it and licked it.

This gave Reddy a chance to speak.

"MR. DOG, I do not know why we should not be good friends," he said. "I am sure we are related. I am the dog that lives at the farm on the other side of the hill, and I have called to let you know I am living in your neighborhood. I have so many bones I thought I would bring you one," said Reddy Fox. "You have a fine place here. I will look around if you do not mind while you are eating the bone."

Mr. Dog was so busy gnawing he did not think of his visitor again for several minutes, and when he did it was a cry of distress from a fat duck that brought him to his senses.

Down went the bone and off flew Mr. Dog after Reddy Fox, who was just crawling under the gate with the duck.

Mr. Dog grabbed him by the tail, but as it was greased well he could not hold on and Reddy Fox slipped out of his grasp, and away he flew, but he dropped the duck.

"You are a fine watch dog to let the sly fox fellow get into our house," quacked Madam Duck as she waddled away to her bed.

Mr. Dog did not reply; he was thinking. "He looked like a fox, but that tail was what deceived me," he said. "Yes, that and the big bone. Now, how did it happen he had such a smooth tail?"

Mr. Dog began to sniff; he smelled grease; he sniffed again. "Why, it is on my mouth," he said, "that is not from the bone. Now where did I get it?"

Mr. Dog thought a minute. "He greased his tail," he said with a growl, "the sly rascal; that was the reason he got away. The very next long-tailed dog I see I will give him a whipping," said Mr. Dog as he crept into his house.

Reddy Fox went supperless to bed, but he gave his tail a good hot, soapy bath first. "I humbled myself by greasing my handsome tail so I would look like that common Dog family and gained nothing by it, but the greased tail saved my life, so I ought not to complain, I suppose."

Anecdotes of Liberty Loan Sale Entered for the Prize of $100 Bond

FOLLOWING are some more anecdotes sent in to the Post-Dispatch in the contest for the $100 Liberty Bond, offered for the best true story of the sale of a Bond of the Third series. The contest closed with the close of the campaign. Announcement will be made soon of the date when the award will be made.

He Changed Bargains.

YESTERDAY Dan Williams, colored porter for a prominent Stock Exchange house, got the "rummage sale" fever, after seeing the wonderful bargains his friends had procured. He decided to get a pair of shoes. One of the men in the office gave him a dollar bill and he rushed out for Tenth and Franklin, but on his way to the sale he was overcome with patriotsm and turned back and breathlessly rushed to a salesman and said: "Boss, I can make my old shoes do; here's my dollar for a first payment on a Liberty Bond and I'll keep up my payments or bust. I want to help the boys.

D. O. WALSH,
307 N. Fourth street.

Baby's Hand Helps Out.

IN response to my ring at the door bell, and my query, "Won't you buy a Liberty Bond, "Yes, I'll take five," was her amazing answer. The woman evidently was her own maid of all work, the house plain, the children many.

I scented a story. "I am delighted to find you so patriotic," I said suggestively.

"Well, it was this way," she replied smiling down at the tot clinging to her dress. "Jimmie,' our eldest, is in the army, and not having heard from him for about three weeks, and knowing that he is at an embarking point, I naturally think about him a great deal. I was doing my work one day, with my mind a thousand miles away, and little Johnnie here was playing around amusing himself as usual, asking me dozens of questions and perfectly satisfied with my yes or no, if they happened to fit in right, when he found a new thing to play with. The ironing board! It made a fine hiding place.

"Standing behind it he extended his little hand from one side, crying out to me, 'Look, mamma, whose hand is this?' Without a thought in the world of what I was saying, subconsciously, I suppose you'd call it, I replied, 'O, I don't know, the Kaiser's!' In a rush, conscious and subconscious mind rushed together, in a paroxism of horror at what I had said. I gazed at the little soft, pink, beautiful hand still held out from the side of the board and apparently severed, and the thought of all the dear little hands of the children of martyred Belgium that have been brought to the German Emperor by the thousand in the quest for iron crosses—well, really, it made me ill.

"'One bond?' I said to myself, 'no, five,' if I have to wash, iron, clean and sew in addition to what I already do, so be it! It will leave me no time to go out maybe, but I will be conserving clothes and have that much more for thrift stamps or for bonds of the next issue, so it works out beautifully, and, besides, it will leave me less time to worry about my Jim."

As I bade her adieu, the baby, little Jim, who in his own way had sold the bonds to his little mother, waved his little hand, so tiny, so pinky white, so kissable, I said to myself, "What if through slackers on this side we fail? God forbid!"

Her Speech Won a Bond.

AT our school we had a four-minutes' speaking contest on Liberty Bonds for which each room chose several candidates. The contest took place on Liberty Bond day. I was chosen with one other to represent our room.

At the conclusion of my speech I was congratulated by my teacher and fellow pupils. I was very glad that my speech had been a success, especially for my room. But my happiness was complete when a lady who had been in the audience said to me, "I was so impressed when you said, 'Are you going to let this beloved flag be insulted and trampled under foot, when a Liberty Bond from you will save it?'" "Although I have bought several bonds already I will take $50 of the money which I have saved up for my vacation, and purchase another one from you." MARY McLEAN,

The Story in a Yard of Silk

Precious Strands of Silkworm's Web First Made Into a Fabric by Chinese Empress—Silk Once Sold for Its Weight in Gold.

SOME thousands of years ago the Empress Si-Ling-Chi was walking in her garden when she observed a pale, green worm feeding on a mulberry leaf, according to Chinese history. Afterward it spun a web. At the suggestion of Emperor Hoang-Ti, the Empress devised a means to weave the dainty strands into cloth. So she was proclaimed the discoverer of a boon to mankind, and received the title "Goddess of the Silkworms." To this day the "Con-Con Feast" is celebrated in her honor. The regard in which silk is now held is scarcely less high; it is durable, a delight to the eye, delicate to the touch and its rustle is music to the ear.

According to Chinese authority, the use of silk dates from 2650 B. C., but it is not so ancient as cotton or wool. Mulberry trees have always abounded in certain parts of the Celestial Kingdom, and on these the silkworms fed for ages before their use became known. The worms are still found wild in many parts of Asia, but produce an inferior quality of silk.

So closely did the Chinese guard their secret that, for a thousand years, silk was exported without the buyers being able to discover how it was produced. Aristotle is said to have been the first European to learn the secret, but for five centuries after his time Greeks and Romans persisted in believing that it was the fiber of some plant.

In the sixth century A. D. all silk was imported from China by way of Persia, and when the Emperor Justinian engaged in war with the latter country he found his supply of raw material shut off. At his instigation, two monks braved the death penalty and, in 555, smuggled the first silkworm eggs out of China. From these practically all the silkworms of the Western world are descended. Silk culture spread to Spain, Greece and Italy, and to this continent through the Spanish conquest of Mexico. It was introduced into the American colonies, and in 1747 Gov. Law wore a coat and stockings made from Connecticut silk. A domesticated silkworm spins a larger cocoon than his wild relation.

THE egg is the size of a turnip seed and from it hatches a worm an eighth of an inch in length. These are kept on trays and fed with leaves of the white mulberry or osage orange. The worm has four moulting seasons, at each of which it sheds its old skin for a larger one. Having reached full growth, it seeks a quiet spot to spin its cocoon.

The silk comes from two glands in a semi-fluid condition, the two strands then passing through the spinneret, a double orifice below the mouth, where they are united into a single thread. From nine to twelve inches of silk per minute are produced at the beginning, but the rate decreases, and about three days are required to complete the cocoon. At the end of 10 days all cocoons not intended for seed are placed in a steam heater to stifle the chrysalis, as the moth, in breaking from the cocoon, ruins it for spinning. One moth lays from 300 to 400 eggs. It takes from 2500 to 3000 cocoons to make a pound of reeled silk, which was once valued at its weight in gold.

The cocoons are sorted according to their color and fineness of texture, placed in warm water to soften them, and then wound upon a reel. This produces raw silk, which, after being soaked in warm soapsuds and dried, is wound upon bobbins. Strands from several bobbins are next spun together, according to size of thread desired. This process is repeated until thread of the proper size for sewing or weaving is produced. The apparatus is highly ingenious; if a single strand breaks in any of the operations, the machine automatically stops.

Finishing touches are added by the "water-stretcher," in which process the bobbins are placed in water and wound onto copper rolls, giving a smoothness and evenness not to be obtained in any other way. Dyeing is a most important operation, for upon it depends the permanency of the colors. The "gum" is first boiled out in strong soapsuds, and after the dye has been applied the silk is put into a steam chest and live steam turned out. This gives it its lustrous, glossy appearance.

THE HOUSEWIFE'S SCRAPBOOK.

SAVE gas in cooking beans and dried peas. They will boil much quicker if a pinch of soda is added to the water in which they are soaked.

The old potatoes are very low in price now, and if peeled and allowed to stand in cold water an hour or more before cooking they will be quite satisfactory. New potatoes should be boiled in their skins.

When opening a can of vegetables, fruits, meat, etc., remove the contents at once. It is advisable to open canned goods and allow them to stand in another vessel a while before serving them.

You can locate small nails, tacks and screws more readily if you keep them in wide-necked bottles or small glass jars instead of in boxes.

In case you spill hot grease upon the table, pour cold water on the spot to harden the grease. It will prevent its soaking into the wood and can be more easily removed.

If there are stains in the table linen, try bleaching them with borax water. Do not boil the linen. Hang it in the sun dripping wet. Occasionally wetting the spots with a weak solution of borax will facilitate the process.

It will add considerably to the wearing qualities of stockings if they are washed before being worn.

The kitchen range can be kept black with little labor if you moisten a cloth with kerosene and briskly rub the stove while it is barely warm. Grease spots, rust and all soiled portions will readily disappear under this treatment.

If your printed cotton gown has faded so badly that you cannot wear it another season, wash it in boiling cream of tartar water and you will have a perfectly white dress to wear.

When you lay the new linoleum on your kitchen floor, cement the seams and edges. This will prevent water from running under it on cleaning day and will thus add to the durability of the linoleum.

After washing the small silver stand it for a couple of minutes into a kettleful of very hot, clean, soapy water containing a few drops of ammonia and you will always have bright spoons, forks, etc.

You Can Nurse Your Baby Longer

INSTEAD of weaning your baby at five or six months, you can probably nurse him the full nine months if, when he is little, you substitute one feeding a day of Nestlé's Food. It is so like mother's milk that he will feel no difference.

Nestlé's Food gives him just that extra strength he needs to help along his growing little body. And when weaning time comes, he will change to the bottle gradually and easily on Nestlé's Food.

It is better for the baby and is better for you. Your own health will be better because you are allowed to miss a nursing or two and go out into the fresh air.

WHEN you wean your baby on Nestlé's Food you know he is safe, because Nestlé's is always the same, always free from germs, always contains just what your baby needs. Don't wean him on raw cows' milk. It has a tough curd the baby can't digest, and home modifying is uncertain.

Nestlé's Food is milk, only purer than you get in bottles, with the tough curd made easier to digest, and with just the right amount of sugar and cereal added. You simply add water to the clean, fluffy powder and boil one minute.

HORNSBY INJURED; BOB WALLACE MAY PLAY SHORT TODAY

Cardinal Slugger Strains Muscle and Is Likely to Miss Battle With Reds.

TONEY BOOKED TO HURL

Big Right Hander Due to Pitch His Second Game of Season Today.

The first misfortune of the season has swooped down on the Cardinals, and it is going to provide a test of the strength or weakness of the club's reserve strength, heretofore considered about the weakest of any club in the National League. This has been brought about through an injury to Rogers Hornsby, the slugging shortstop.

Hornsby strained a muscle in practice previous to yesterday's victory over the Reds. Rogers paid slight attention to it until the game had progressed into the waning innings, when the mishap bothered him so much he found it difficult to field ground balls. It also affected his throwing.

Injury Worse Last Night.

Trainer Hollinsworth worked overtime on the Cardinal star last night in an effort to smooth out the wrinkled muscle, but Hornsby reported at a late hour that the injury was still bothering him and rather than take a chance, Manager Hendricks may let him ride the bench this afternoon.

It is for just such contingencies that the Cardinals seem poorly equipped. With all due respect to Bob Wallace, Hendricks admits that he has no substitutes of the caliber he desires, i. e., players who can get in the lineup for a stretch of a few games and do the job equally as good as the men they supplant.

If Hornsby is unable to play this afternoon, it more than likely will cause a shakeup in the batting order. Gene Paulette, who is hitting any and all kinds of pitching now, probably will be inserted in the cleanup position, the berth assigned to Hornsby. Wallace or Betzel, who will play short, will bat in Paulette's position.

After going hitless for seven innings, yesterday, the Knot Holers shook off the batting coma which southpaws previously had forced on them and drove Rube Bressler to the club house. Five big runs were accumulated in the eighth stanza, although had Lee Magee fielded Hornsby's roller cleanly, the Reds might have made away with the contest by a 3 to 2 score.

There were two out at the time and two runs in. Douglas Baird, who had previously forced Gonzales at third, was on first. It seemed certain that Hornsby had spoiled the rally as his grounder went straight to Magee. Lee, however, obligingly fumbled and all hands were safe.

Paulette Wins With Double.

Cruise's single and a double by Paulette put over the necessary two runs and the Cardinals had won their second straight. Oscar Horstman relieved Bill Doak in the ninth and although Sherwood Magee opened with a single, Griffith, Neale and "Words" Blackburn were easy victims.

"Hod" Eller, who rejoined the Reds yesterday after an absence of several days, got in on the Cardinals' business of scoring runs in the eighth, relieving Bressler after Jack Smith had made the third successive single of the inning with none out. Hence, all the runs were counted off Eller, but he faced a bad mess when he appeared on the scene.

A double by Neale, Blackburn's sacrifice and Wingo's single, gave the Reds their first run off Doak in the fifth. Singles by Lee Magee, Roush and Neale, with S. Magee's sacrifice sandwiched in, produced two more for the visitors in the sixth. That was all in a scoring way for Matty.

Fred Toney, the titanic right-hander, is scheduled to work in the third game of the series between the clubs this afternoon. Lee Meadows is Hendricks' choice. The game will begin at 3:30 o'clock. About 1000 were present at yesterday's matinee.

JESS WILLARD ENGAGES KELLEY AS TRAINER FOR COMING TITLE CONTEST

CHICAGO, May 8.—"Spider" Kelley of San Francisco, formerly a clever lightweight fighter and more widely known as a second and trainer of boxers was engaged yesterday by Jess Willard to act as trainer, advisor and chief second for the champion in the latter's proposed battle for the title with Fred Fulton.

Kelley, whose ability to dispel gloom around training camps is proverbial among boxing enthusiasts, will have complete charge of Willards' preparation, it is understood.

Kelley, who acted as chief second to Jack Dempsey in the latter's recent battle with Billy Miske at St. Paul, left last night for San Francisco but expects to return as soon as he is notified definite arrangements for staging the Willard-Fulton battle are completed. Col. J. C. Miller, who will manage the contest is on his way to the Atlantic coast to consider offers for holding the bout there.

CADDOCK AND ZBYSZKO WILL WRESTLE TONIGHT

CHICAGO, May 8.—Earl Caddock, champion heavyweight wrestler and now a Sergeant in the national army, said today he expected to be sent "over there" in a short time. The Sergeant is stationed at Fort Dodge (Des Moines), Io., and will return there after his match here tonight with Wladek Zbyszko, the Polish champion. The Pole will have the advantage over the infantryman of some 40 odd pounds. The pair met some time ago in Des Moines and after each had won a fall Caddock was awarded the referee's decision after an hour of wrestling for the third fall.

The Post-Dispatch cameraman snapped the quartet as Manager Christy Mathewson of the Reds was "visiting" with the Ansons. "Pop" and his daughters are appearing in a skit entitled "First Aid to Father." The Misses Anson are no weaklings, as the picture will show, both Matty and "Pop" being over six feet tall.

"With Pitcher Only 45 Feet Away, Batters of Old Hit Better Than Moderns"---Anson

Veteran Firstbaseman, Who Played 27 Years in Major League, Cites His Own Record to Prove His Point.

By John E. Wray.

Adrian C. Anson, the ruddy-faced, 66-year-old veteran of other baseball days, who for 27 consecutive seasons, was a member of a major league club, and who, for 22 of them (or as far back as authentic records were kept), batted a grand average of .337, is not one who believes that the batters of the old day had an easier time of it.

Anson bridged the gap between the old and the new, in baseball. In his 27 years of service he played under the closing of the old and the beginning of the new order of things. No more competent testimony could be given, in comparing the two periods, than that of the gray-haired first baseman. Hearken to him:

"Of course you hear that the old-time batters had such good averages because batting conditions in those days favored the hitter. You can salt some of that. For example, under the old conditions in 1877 I hit .231. Twenty years later, in 1897, after 26 years or more of major league service under both old and new conditions, I batted .303.

"Does that smash the theory of the latter-day boys, I wonder?

Then and Now.

"IT is true the pitchers WERE handicapped, in those days. They had to throw the ball as called by the batter, high or low, and they were not allowed to deliver an overhand pitch. The foul strike rule, too, was unknown.

But against these disadvantages may be mentioned the following points in favor of the pitcher:

"1. He was allowed seven to nine balls, before a batter walked.

"2. He was, in 1876, only 45 feet from the plate, and later, only 50 feet.

"3. He pitcheed in a box 6 to 7 feet long, and not from a slab, and could take a run when delivering the ball.

* * *

Batted Best Under New Conditions.

"IF you want any further evidence from my own career here's another point: In 1884 they removed practically all the restrictions from the pitcher. Yet, three years later, under conditions which would now be considered much more unfavorable to the batsman, I batted the highest average of my career, .421, and that was 16 years after I first joined a major league club."

You win in a canter, Cap. The moderns haven't a leg to stand on.

* * *

Vindicating Zimmerman.

I ASKED Anson what, besides the belfry of John Anderson, was the greatest "bone" he had ever seen.

"Son, that's too big an order. Maybe I committed it myself, in the opinion of some other fellow. But I would like to say on this subject that much condemnation by fans is entirely undeserved by the players.

"The case of Heine Zimmerman in the world's series is in point. I saw the play in which Zimmerman pursued Collins across the plate. The 'bone' was not Zimmerman's at all. It was committed by a man who has, so far as I know, not yet been mentioned.

"Here was the situation: The catcher had gone down the line, in the run-up; the pitcher had also mixed in; this left home plate unguarded—a capital crime in any man's day. There was only one player left who logically was obliged to protect the plate—that was First Baseman Holke.

"His was the bone, not Zimmerman."

Bull's-eye No. 2—we said the same thing last fall, Captain.

Browns Lost First Shutout in Baseball History 43 Years Ago

BASEBALL history reveals some interesting facts. Among other things you discover that the Cincinnati Reds were the first team to appear in knickerbockers. This was in 1868.

In 1846 the New Yorks beat the Knickerbockers (who, in spite of their name, were long trousers) 21 to 1 in four innings. It was necessary to play only until one team collected 21 runs. That ended the game.

Up to June 19, 1846, a popular method of putting the baserunner out was to hit him with the ball. In the game between the Knickbockers and New Yorks this rule was abolished for good.

On July 4, 1886, a game between Leadville and St. Joseph clubs, at Leadville, Col., was stopped by a snow storm. This is the only game on record that was ever stopped by a snow storm on July 4.

Chicago White Stockings beat the St. Louis Browns 1 to 0, on May 12, 1875. This is the first shut-out on record.

In 1875 there were ten men on a side, the tenth man being an assistant catcher who would chase the foul flies.

Despite His Right to Call for "High or Low" Ball, the Batsman of 40 Years Ago Labored Under Disadvantages.

"Babe" Ruth, Pitcher, Pinch Hitter and First Baseman, Is Batting .435

George (Babe) Ruth, the husky left-handed pitcher, who for the past two days has been used at first base by the Boston Red Sox, is going after more slugging records. On three sucbessive days, Ruth has batted out a home run. Yesterday he hit Walter Johnson, the fireball king, for a circuit smash with one on. Ruth, for the season, has a batting average of .435.

To date the big left-hander has played in eight games and has made at least one hit in each of them. In one of the battles he was used as a pinch-hitter and came through with a single. Of the 10 hits he has made, three of them have been home runs and two doubles. His hitting record:

Date	AB.	H.	Date	AB.	H.
April 15	3	1	April 30	2	1
April 19	3	1	May 4	4	2
April 20	1	1	May 6	3	2
April 24	3	1	May 7	3	1

Totals: 23 times at bat, 10 hits; average, .435.

Phillies in Real Slump.

The Phillies of Pat Moran are at present in a real slump. When the team went down to defeat at the hands of the Giants yesterday, 7-3, it lost its seventh straight contest. The Phillies are not scoring runs, as is shown by the fact that in the seven battles they have tallied just five times. In five of the games the Moranmen have been blanked, on three occasions by the Giants and twice by the Superbas. The Phillies' opponents on the other hand have crossed the plate 44 times, an average of more than 6 runs a game.

Red Sox Lose Another.

The Red Sox dropped their fourth straight game yesterday when they went down before Walter Johnson and the Nationals, 3-2. Ruth's homer with one on saved the leaders from a whitewash. In the quartet of battles, the Hubtown entry has scored only 11 runs, against 25 for the opposition. Bush, Ruth, Mays and Leonard have been beaten in the order named.

Bad Day for Fielders.

Yesterday was a bad day for the fielders in the two major leagues. In the eight contests, 38 errors were made, just two clubs going through with clean fielding records—the Giants and Braves. The National Leaguers made 21 errors and the outfits in the Ban Johnson circuit 17. The Phillies were the worst offenders being charged with six bobbles.

Wood Is Batting .307.

Joe Wood, former star pitcher of the Boston Red Sox, now with the Indians, and who in the last 11 games has been used in left field is batting .307, having made 12 hits in 39 times at the plate. Just three flingers, Allan Sothoron of the Browns and Ed Cicotte and Claude Williams of the White Sox have held him hitless. Yesterday he bumped Williams, Benz and Russell of the White Sox for three out of four.

Five Hits for Rawlings.

"Pep" Rawlings, who is being used at shortstop by the Braves, with Herzog moving to second, made five hits in as many attempts against Cheney and Durning of the Superbas yesterday. The Braves won, 16-0, getting 17 hits off the deliveries of the two Dodger hurlers. Herzog had three out of five.

RANDALL CLOSES RING CAREER WITH THIRD 'COMEBACK'

Veteran Lightweight, After Beating Hanlon, Says He Is Through With Game.

Eddie Randall, veteran local lightweight and one of the cleverest boxers St. Louis ever produced, closed his boxing career last night with an eight-round victory over Jimmy Hanlon at the South Broadway Athletic Club. This was his second victory over Hanlon and the third comeback he has attempted in the ring in the past six years.

It will be remembered by a majority of the veteran fight fans in this city that Randall retired from the ring about 1910. In 1911, however, he was induced to try a comeback against Harry Brewer here. Randall won that bout on a foul in the sixth round. It was fought April 17, 1912.

Loses to McFarland.

Shortly after that Mal Doyle, a telegraph operator who maintained a "stable" of boxers as a side line, lined up a match for Randall with Packey McFarland in Cincinnati. The clever Packey was then in his heyday, but Randall consented to take him on. The bout was staged July 3, 1912, and Eddie went to the mat in the third round. Randall got a little over $400 for his end of the purse.

In 1915 he once more attempted a comeback. On this occasion he knocked out Leo Witt in nine rounds at the Future City club, which, because of Witt's youth and the fact that he had gone through some mighty punishing bouts, was considered quite an achievement for the veteran Randall.

Subsequent to his bout with Witt, Randall mixed in the game only as a referee and instructor for aspiring youngsters. Moreover, in the days when he was only a youngster Randall was one of the cleverest boxers in the city. He ranked right up with George Kirkwood, Ollie Kirk, Harry Trendall and numerous other boxers of his day, who were noted for their speed and science.

Wanted to Meet Anderson.

After the bout with Witt, Randall asserted that he again was through with the game. Then came Bobby Anderson, whose string of victories here was halted only when he broke an arm. After Anderson had disposed of practically every ligthweight sent against him, talk of a match with Randall began.

Eddie was willing enough, but until recently a bout between them was never framed. When it appeared the pair would be matched, Randall asked that he test himself, before meeting the Duquoin slugger. His request was granted and Randall's third comeback was an eight-round victory over Jimmy Hanlon at the South Broadway club several weeks ago.

Last night he repeated the victory, and now has announced that he never again will don the gloves. Eddie says he realizes age is against him and the stress of training is no longer a pleasure. And despite his 35 or 36 years, Eddie today is in fa rbetter condition than many boxers half his age. He has always taken remarkable care of himself, lived a clean life and hence is able to outpoint mere boys who regard boxing as their means of livelihood and not a side line, as does Randall.

Harry Claves put over his fifth straight victory when he outpointed Hal Clark, former Milwaukee lightweight, but who now is in the service of Uncle Sam and stationed at Jefferson Barracks. Claves took every round of the bout and inflicted a great deal of punishment on Clarks' face.

Young Curley, despite a weight advantage of half a dozen pounds, could do no better than draw with Willie Necla in a six-round preliminary. Walter Heisner refereed the show, which was attended by a very small crowd. It was the final program of the season at the South Broadway Club.

OLD-TIME PLAYERS TO MEET IN BENEFIT GAME

CHICAGO, May 8.—An association of old-time baseball players has been formed as a result of the war charity game arranged between players of a decade and more ago, which will be played here today. This announcement was made when the lineup for the game was given out. In this list of names appears that of the evangelist, Billy Sunday, who will play rightfield on one team; Fred Pfeffer, famous in his day as a second baseman; Wee McGill and Tony Mullane, opposing pitchers; Kid Gleason, Jake Stahl, Jimmy Ryan, Barry McCormick and Frank Houseman.

SCHLENK IS STAR IN CITY BOWLING EVENT

Henry Schlenk of the Grand-Arsenal League last night did the feature bowling in the city handicap tournament on the Washington alleys, when he went into first place in the all-events, with a total of 1776. Schlenk counted 613 in the five-man and 507 in the doubles and wound up with 656 in the individuals. He had a handicap of 25 pins in the individuals, which gave him a count of 683 and put him in second place.

F. Pellet and H. Tiefenbrunn, aided by a handicap of 84 pins, did the best rolling in the doubles, with 1192.

FOREST PARK NET CLUB TO START EVENT SUNDAY

Eat Potatoes.

CUT out the tomato
And eat the potato,
Including the eyes and the skin.
Go strong on the spud
And we'll land with a thud
On William's imperial chin.

Once sat on a tuffet,
Eating of curds and whey;
But now she is wiser,
To help lick the Kaiser
She eats a potato each day.

Many a brainy head is covered by a last year's straw. You can't judge a cocoanut by the shell.

Yesterday was "Five-Three" day in St. Louis. This is the day the Cards and Browns usually win their games by a 5—3 score.

* * *

Good Work.

The Cards worked the "delayed rally" on the Reds yesterday evening at the vesperian period of the proceedings. Aided and abetted by a former member of the home guard they bagged the frolic in the eighth frame, turning defeat into victory and causing the leader of the enemy to seriously consider the offer of the Y. M. C. A. to go to France.

* * *

The crowd was twice as large as it was on the day previous. He brought a friend with him.

* * *

Donation Day.

Yesterday was the day the second baseman had set aside for slipping games to St. Louis teams. "Pep" Young donated one to the Browns, while Lee Magee was equally generous to his former comrades.

* * *

There is some excuse for Lee as he has played in a St. Louis uniform so often that unless he refreshes his memory by taking an occasional squint at the initials on his uniform he is liable to forget who he is working for.

* * *

The Dodgers celebrated the return of Zack Wheat to the game by attaching themselves to the short end of a 16—0 frolic with the Braves.

* * *

The Dodgers did better than that on a Wheatless diet. However this is only seed time. The harvest will come later.

* * *

Easy Sledding.

The Phils continued their great losing streak and made it seven straight by giving the Giants another much-needed victory. The Giants hope to be in the clear by the Fourth of July and then coast the rest of the journey.

* * *

It remained for "Lefty" Hamilton to stop the Cubs' winning streak of nin games. "Lefty" is getting back to the old form he used to show before he tackled the game of "bridge" with such disastrous results.

* * *

The Giants are due in Pittsburg next Friday. If they land in Smoketown with that winning streak intact they are going to have their work cut out getting by "Ham."

* * *

Ross Young has about given up the idea of filling Davy Robertson's shoes. They're too tight for him.

* * *

And be it said that Davy's shoes covered considerable ground.

Cincinnati fans say Lena Blackburne is a second Herzog. We'll say he is from the nose out.

OTTO WALLACE stopped Bob Normandy in the eighth round in Chanute, Kan., the other night. Normandy evidently wasn't there with bells on.

* * *

John the Barber attached the receipts of the Dempsey-Miske fight in St. Paul. The attachment wasn't reciprocated, as the receipts could not be found by the attache after the fight.

Fight receipts have a way of fading into obscurity when there is a Sheriff in the offing.

THE POST-DISPATCH DAILY RECORD OF MARKETS AND FINANCE

INDUSTRIALS IRREGULAR, RAILROADS FIRMER IN NEW YORK SPECULATION

U. S. Steel Reflects Realizing After Wide Advance of Yesterday—Bonds Are in Fair Request and Steady.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial review today, says:

"With continuing great activity, unusually well distributed throughout the list, the entire stock market advanced in the early trading, gains in the railway shares being especially noteworthy. In the later afternoon, what appeared to be a profit-taking movement, developed, and the industrial shares in numerous cases went below yesterday's closings.

"In view of the extremely rapid rise since the present week began, no great surpris was caused at this reaction. The market, taken as a whole, closed with very irregular net changes for the day; advances and declines being equally in evidence.

"Today's high prices, marking an advance of 2 to 6 points over last week's closing, and of 5 to 25 poitns over the low figures of last January—with the recovery unsually well distributed throughout the list—has caused an unusual variety of explanation in Wall street. It is, for one thing, a very notable contrast to the stock market of the week which followed the closing of the lists for the second Liberty Loan last autumn.

"Prices in that week fell 5 to 10 points under extremely heavy liquidation, an dthe tehories to acount for the movement were as varied as the theories now in circuation. Bad news from the war, uneasiness over the new taxation measure and fear of a tighening money market because of the very large amount of bank funds locked up in the second Liberty Loan, were all undoubtedly effective causes.

"One may pretty safely look in similar directions for the separate causes which have contributed to this week's rise in prices. For the situation is largely a direct contrast to that of last November. The war news has certainly been good, in so far as it has indicated a more decisive check to the German campaign in the west, than any one ventured to anticipate, a week or more ago.

"The taxes still confront individuals, corporations and the money market, but they have at least been now arranged for, whereas the atmosphere of six months ago was one of outright bewilderment.

"But beyond even this, the result of the third war loan has in this regard been particularly reassuring—that it turns out to have been in rare degree a popular subscription; and that the banks have not been called upon to take up and hold the bonds with their own funds, to anything like the extent which marked the subscription of last October. How much tht means to the machinery of the financial markets, we are likelly ealearn as the season goes on.

"Figures of the country's iron production during April, as given out today, were distinctly favorable, the average daily output having increased 5959 tons over March, and 31,808 over January, and standing at the highest figure since last May.

"As a matter of fact, last month's pace of production has been exceeded in only four other months of the country's history—two in 1917, and two in 1916. Furthermore, the daily output on May 1 was nearly 4 per cent larger than on April 1, and breaks all records for the opening of any month.

"The Iron Age, reviewing the trade of the past week, notes that buying of iron and steel for general use has stopped short."

"This was one of the occasions when a favorable crop report, covering conditions as of the first day of the month, could not tell all that was good. Even here in the city, every one familiar with farm work has been aware, this past week, that weather conditions for growing things were almost ideal. The question remained, whether the rest of the country had fared as well.

Today's weekly bulletin of the Weather Bureau, on crop conditions over the whole United States, shows that the country at large has been equally fortunate, and that the growing grain is better off today than the monthly crop report indicates.

"In the Middle West, the week's weather conditions have been exceptionally favorable, with heat and rainfall alternating to the best advantge. Seeding of spring wheat is now nearly completed under the best auspices; farmers are plowing up and planting almost to the northern border, with the sail in excellent condition, and the small grains are, in every case, doing extremely well.

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, May 8.—Rails and specialties were the strong reatures at the outset of today's stock dealings, the former being stimulated by reports of a forthcoming substantial increase in freight and pasenger rates. Reading was especially active, changing hands in round amounts at an extreme advance of 2 points. Other coalers, also Pacifics, were from one-half to a point higher. Sumatra Tobacco and Industrial Alcohol rose 1½ and 4 points, respectively, and Distillers, Atlantic Gulf, Studebaker and Colorado Fuel gained 1 to 1½. United States Steel made a new maximum of 103⅞, but reacted fractionally. Liberty bonds were irregular.

The enormous dealings in Reading, at a further advance, overshadowed operations elsewhere, although rails as a group were more active than at any recent period. Other coalers and Pacifics followed Reading's lead, also New York Central, at gains of 1 to 1½ points.

Meanwhile U. S. Steel was under pressure due to heavy profit-taking, losing a point. Other equipments and motors extended their early advance, but coppers and shippings lagged.

Liberty 3½s sold at 98.90 to 98.94, first 4s at 95.90 to 95.96 and second 4s at 95.84 to 95.90.

Substantial extension of Reading's early advance, United States Steel's increasing irregularity, a brisk spurt in shippings and General Motors' four-point gain accompanied the boarder dealings of the midsession. Numerous low-priced rails aso made appreciable gains.

COTTON MARKET RALLIES AFTER SHARP BREAK

NEW YORK, May 8.—The cotton market opened easy today, at a decline of 10 to 25 points, in response to lower cables and the favorable weather map. There was some trade buying on the call, but the demand was readily supplied, with July selling off to 25.03c and October to 24.42c shortly after the opening, or 29 to 32 points net lower.

At this level, however, there was a good deal of covering, which with some further buying from trade sources caused rallies of 18 or 20 points from the lowest before the publication of the weekly weather report.

There were rumors around the ring that the latest returns to a prominent Southern authority indicated that the cotton acreage would be two-tenths of one per cent below last year, and that domestic mill consumption for April would amount to 552,000 for the same month last year.

FURTHER HALF CENT ADVANCE SCORED IN LOCAL EGG PRICES

Receipts Light and Demand Active—Potatoes in Liberal Offering and Values Weak.

Continued light arrivals and a good local demand caused a further half-cent advance in egg prices today, all sales being recorded at 32½c. Butter and poultry values remained quotably unchanged.

The potato market ruled dull and weak under heavy offerings and a slow demand, trade being well supplied. Home-grown radishes were plentiful and cheap. Apples continued in good demand and firm. Today's prices are as follows:

CORN CLOSES STEADY AFTER SHARP BREAK

Buying by Shorts Is Cause of Late Rally—Oats Also Firm at the Finish.

Liquidation in corn and oats continued on the Merchants' Exchange market today, and futures averaged over 1c lower. There was little in the market news to stimulate buying, but in the late trading shorts covered and the closing was steady as compared with yesterday's finish.

Weather is ideal for crop development and corn planting, and oats and wheat are growing under perfect conditions. Export demands have dried up completely, and suggest that Government needs and allied requirements were bought at abnormally high prices, while the market was artificially influenced by severe winter weather and lack of transportation.

Crop report by Winnipeg Free Press, says season in the Canadian Northwest is nearly three weeks ahead of 1917, with practically all wheat seeded. Early sown wheat is up; in some cases is four inches high. Rain is badly needed in Manitoba, and to a less extent in Saskatchewan and Alberta. About 50 per cent of oats are seeded in the three provinces and 25 per cent of the barley. Flax seeding has been heavy.

Bradstreet's shows world's wheat decreased 1,102,000 bu last week; corn decreased 466,000 bu; oats decreased 1,511,000 bu.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 20,000 bu; oats decreased 15,000 bu for four days; flour shipments 53,300 bbls; wheat shipments 28 cars.

Clearances of wheat today none; corn 110,000 bu; oats 81,000 bu; flour 10,000 bu; wheat and flour 45,00 bu.

St. Louis Cash Grain.

Cash corn was steady to 1c to 3c off for white; yellow 1c to 2c up; mixed steady. White in good demand; mixed and yellow quiet.

LARGE FARM STOCKS OF CORN DEPRESS FUTURES

CHICAGO, May 8.—Government figures showing that commercial stocks of corn are much larger than a year ago, had a decidedly bearish effect today on corn values. The fact that the weather continued auspicious for farm work and pastures tended also to weaken prices. There was general selling and only limited support.

Opening quotations, which varied from the same as yesterday's finish to 1c lower, with May $1.27⅝, and July $1.45¼ to $1.45, were followed by a material further setback.

Oats declined under liquidation on a heavy scale by holders. The trade seemed to be much impressed by lack of seaboard demand and by the fine crop outlook. After opening ¼c to ⅝c down, with May 66⅝c to 66⅞c, the market continued to sag.

Hogs at the highest price ever known in May strengthened provisions. Offerings were scarce.

"GERMANY torpedoes Spanish ships, murders unarmed Spanish sailors and at the same time preaches in Spain, by means of an army of propagandists, the horrible sin of Spanish unneutrality."

The speaker was Don Jaime Bourbon-Veragua of the Denver Spanish Consulate.

"'When shall I call again?'

"So you were once a slave, eh?" said the gentleman.

"Yas, sah," said Uncle Ned.

"How thrilling!" said the gentleman. "And after the war you got your freedom, eh?"

"No, sah," said Ned gloomily. "I didn't get mah freedom, sah. After de war I done got married!"—The Fifth Avenue Bus.
